Ford fires own shots at Concord, Lexington

CONCORD, Mass. (AP) — At Concord and Lexington, where the first battles of the American Revolution were fought 200 years ago, President Ford sounded a call Saturday for unity at home and reconciliation and reconstruction in the world.

While receiving the cheers and applause of crowds estimated at more than 125,000 in Concord, Ford also ran into perhaps the severest heckling of his presidency from a counter-bicentennial group.

At the Old North Bridge at Concord, where the "shot heard round the world" was fired April 19, 1775, Ford called for renewal of America's "belief and commitment to human rights and liberties."

"It is a time to place the hand of healing on the heart of America — not division and blame," he said. "When all is said and done, the finest tribute that may ever be paid this nation and people is that we provided a home for freedom." Ford declared.

Ford received a mostly friendly reception from the crowd on the side of the river where he was speaking. But across the river were about 20,000 persons gathered for a People's Bicentennial Commission celebration and many of them chanted and booed as Ford cited U.S. leadership in the world from which he said the country "cannot and will not retreat."

Several demonstrators tried to run across the bridge but the runners were intercepted by police.

Ford appeared unperturbed by the heckling. He crossed over the bridge during the ceremonies to place a wreath at the Minuteman statue and to watch British Ambassador Peter Ramsbotham place a similar symbol in memory of British soldiers killed in one of the first skirmishes of the Revolution.

At similar ceremonies at the Lexington Green eight miles away, Ford told a cheering crowd that he had had a "wonderful experience" in launching the nation's bicentennial.

He said he had an "inspirational opportunity today — first at Concord and now at Lexington" which gave him "a new spirit and a new strength about our country."

"We have inherited a great tradition," Ford said at the historic Lexington site. But, he added, it was now the job of all the people to see that when Americans gather 100 years from now, "they can say what was done here on this date was the kickoff for a new century of unity and progress at home as well as abroad."

He added, "If we join in unity in the next 100 years, then we will have done our part in tribute to those who have preceded us."

Police said about 50,000 persons were at the Lexington speech, which followed a renactment by Redcoats and Minutemen of the Lexington battle, also 200 years ago.

Reds behead top Cambodian leaders

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Cambodian refugees said Saturday that Khmer Rouge forces executed 43 former government soldiers after taking control of a provincial town, and the rebel radio said most top leaders of the fallen government who remained in Phnom Penh had been beheaded.

Col. Jhori Tone, former governor of Pailin, a gem-mining town 220 miles northwest of Phnom Penh, said the soldiers were slain Friday after he complied with rebel orders to raise white flags over the town.

"When the Khmer Rouge came they beat up my troops and shot people who resisted. They ordered my soldiers to wear their uniforms, then shot 43 men," he told Associated Press reporter Visetsak Sanguanpong at Ban Pong Nam Ron in Thailand.

Among those reported killed was Capt. Lon Vera, younger brother of former Cambodian President Lon Nol. After the executions, more than 1,000 persons, including 300 troops, fled the five miles to the Thai border, where they were disarmed and reportedly given permission to remain seven days.

The broadcast by the insurgents, who captured Phnom Penh on Thursday, gave no names of those beheaded and did not say when they were killed.

It said: "The new traitors' committee established last week and which stubbornly chose to resist our forces has totally collapsed. Some have fled the country, but most have had their heads cut off."

The reference was to the seven-man "supreme committee" established after President Lon Nol fled the country.

The committee appealed for a cease-fire Wednesday and extended an offer to give up authority. But Prince Norodom Sihanouk, titular leader of the Khmer Rouge, rejected it.

Lt. Gen. Sak Suthsakhan, head of the committee, is the only high government official known for certain to have left Cambodia alive as the end approached. Bangkok government sources said he was staying at Utapao air base in Thailand.

The fate of Premier Long Boret, No. 2 man on the committee, was unknown. Some reports in Bangkok said he had escaped to Thailand, but reliable sources said he was caught by the Khmer Rouge as he tried to flee Phnom Penh by helicopter. There were unconfirmed reports that he was then killed.

However, the Paris newspaper Le Monde reported that Long Boret, Lon Nol's brother Lon Non and several other former generals and cabinet ministers were being held prisoner.

For evacuation?

3 U.S. carriers put out to sea

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three U.S. aircraft carriers put to sea in the Western Pacific on Saturday for possible use in the evacuation of Americans from South Vietnam.

U.S. officials reported, meanwhile, that the American presence in that embattled country was dropping toward the 3,000 mark with about 500 civilians flown out in the past two days. According to previous State Department estimates there were about 6,000 Americans in South Vietnam when the evacuations began.

North Vietnam called deployment of the carriers a "brazen challenge" and a violation of the Paris peace accords.

A foreign ministry statement broadcast by Radio Hanoi said the action shows the United States is continuing to interfere in South Vietnamese political affairs.

The Pentagon said the carriers Midway and Okinawa sailed out of Subic Bay in the Philippines and the Hancock from Singapore. Two other carriers, the Enterprise and the Coral Sea, are also in the western Pacific.

Earlier, helicopters capable of carrying 35 persons each were loaded on to the Hancock at Pearl Harbor in Hawaii and the carrier is believed capable of easily rescuing 1,000 Americans, if necessary.

The news blackout from Pnmom Penh was into its third day. The International Red Cross as well as most news organizations were unable to contact representatives in the fallen city. Le Monde did not say how it received its dispatch but said normal communications had not been re-established.

Diplomatic sources said a number of foreign journalists had taken refuge at the French embassy and were safe.

In addition to the refugees from Pailin, Cambodians streamed into Thailand from the provincial town of Samrong.

Communist-led forces were reported consolidating positions around Saigon on Saturday as Americans continued to leave the frightened South Vietnamese capital.

The Saigon command reported only sporadic fighting at Long An province 25 miles southwest of Saigon in the Mekong Delta, but there were signs the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese were moving into strategic positions in the province. Long An is the delta gateway to the capital region.

The Saigon command also said more than 20 artillery and rocket rounds hit Bien Hoa air base 15 miles north of Saigon, another possible point from which to move on the capital. Light action was reported continuing at Xuan Loc, 40 miles east of Saigon.

The U.S. Defense Department in Washington did not reveal the destination of the three aircraft carriers, but the government has been considering the use of carriers for evacuations from Vietnam if necessary.

At least 215 Americans, some with Vietnamese wives and children, landed at Clark Air Base in the Philippines Saturday on U.S. military flights from Saigon. Some of the arriving Americans complained that evacuations were being held up because the South Vietnamese government was delaying exit visas for Vietnamese wives and children of many of the Americans.

Militiamen stand up to Redcoat guns as in 1775

LEXINGTON, Mass. (AP) — Shots rang out, acrid smoke filled the air and eight American revolutionaries dropped to the damp ground in simulated death.

As 30,000 spectators watched, the 75 hastily armed militiamen fell back before the heavy musket fire of the Redcoats in a Bicentennial re-enactment of the first encounter of the War for Independence.

Moments later, the militiamen regrouped and the crowd broke into cheers as they marched off in formation.

The re-enactment began before dawn. The town's church bells tolled an alarm and the militiamen gathered to face the British.

As onlookers stood 7 to 10 deep around Lexington Green, George Gabriel of Lexington, in the role of Capt. John Parker, mustered his troops.

"Stand your ground! Don't fire unless fired upon!" he ordered.

Then the red-coated British appeared, and for five minutes, musket fire echoed across the green.

The battle followed carefully researched outlines of the clash 200 years ago, with both militiamen and Redcoats in authentic uniforms.

But this time the colonials arrived not on foot but by chartered school bus.

Like the original battle, the re-enactment was held at 5 a.m., but unlike the original, was witnessed by thousands of tourists from around the country.

Later in the day, the celebration moved to Concord, where the Minutemen made a stand at North Bridge and held off the British for the first American victory of the war.

Nearly 200,000 tourists pedaled, paddled and hiked into Concord and Lexington Saturday to celebrate the skirmishes of colonial farmers with the British 200 years ago that grew into the War for Independence.

Hundreds of latter-day militiamen, boy scouts and school bands marched while thousands of onlookers crowded the streets and fields under grey, drizzling skies.

The activities already were under way by Friday evening when crowds began to stream into the two towns.

In Concord, most roads were sealed off, so people — many of them young — rode bicycles, hiked with back packs and paddled canoes down the Concord River into town.

Probe may reveal Medicaid scandal

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 150 doctors and other medical practicioners are being investigated in a $2 million Medicaid fraud, believed to be the largest single scandal in the health program's history, the New York Post said.

The newspaper said a federal grand jury here is looking into reports that surgeons, psychiatrists, internists, opticians, dentists, pharmacists and chiropractors submitted bills for medication and treatment not needed or not administred.

Zambian leader at W.H., warns of bloodshed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of Zambia urged Saturday night that the United States support efforts to achieve "majority rule in Rhodesia and Namibia immediately and the ending of apartheid in South Africa."

At a White House state dinner in his honor, Zambian leader Kenneth D. Kaunda warned that "southern Africa is poised for a dangerous armed conflict," but said the situation still could be resolved peacefully through negotiations and U.S. support.

Kaunda responded to a toast by President Ford with an impassioned plea for efforts to help avoid bloodshed in Africa.

"We wish America to understand our aims and objectives," Kaunda declared. "We are not fighting whites. We are fighting an evil and a brutal system and on this there can be no compromise."

Appealing for U.S. backing, Kaunda said "we feel it is our moral duty to avoid bloodshed where we can ... but not at any price, not at the price of freedom and justice."

Cruise ship carrying aged, crippled catches fire, sinks; 19 die

COLOGNE, Germany (AP) — A cruise ship carrying aged and crippled Dutch passengers caught fire and sank at its mooring early Saturday, leaving 19 dead or presumed dead in the worst Rhine River disaster since World War II.

Survivors staggered onto the pier in night gowns, pajamas and bathrobes. Police and firemen threw extra gangplanks onto the ship and rammed windows and doors to reach the passengers, some of them confined to wheel chairs.

A woman died after being dragged from the flaming ship and police reported 18 others were missing and presumed drowned. They were believed trapped in the burned-out hull of the 184-foot Dutch river steamer, the Princess Irene, which docked overnight within a mile of Cologne's towering medieval cathedral.

"The shouting was horrible," said a 58-year-old paraplegic woman who identified herself as Mrs. Van Der Meulen. "I was saved by the cries of a friend, as I couldn't shout myself. Then I lay for a long time in my housecoat on the quay by the burning ship."

"It was hell, the cries of helpless invalids in anguish," sobbed a 67-year-old passenger named Butter. "I was pulled out and left on the quay in my underwear. I was in danger of suffocating from the smoke when I was put in an ambulance."

An unidentified man bleeding from the ear told a newsman he had lost his wife in the disaster. "As soon as I got free I tried to pull her out by the neck, but she suffocated in the thick smoke," he said.

Wijnie Seller, 17, a stewardess who left the ship before it sailed last Sunday, said she tried to convince Dutch officials to stop the cruise because she thought the ship was unsafe. But she said her pleas were ignored. She said she found cigarette butts below decks where smoking was prohibited.

BICENTENNIAL COLLEGE

But Chino traditional plan tentatively approved

Move to kill year-round school dead

By JON MORRIS
P-B Staff Writer

Any move to scrap Chino's year-round program appears dead, at least for this year.

However, the Chino school board probably succeeded in pleasing nearly everyone on both sides of the YRS controversy by tentatively approving a plan Friday night in which a traditional program would be offered on every campus in 1975-76.

The motion, by trustee Pete VanderPoel, came at the close of a three-hour adjourned meeting attended by a crowd of 300 persons in the Gird School multipurpose room. The meeting was moved from the district board room to accommodate the throng.

Trustees scheduled another public hearing on the controversial program for April 29, and final action on the plan to offer a traditional program at each school now on YRS is expected.

In effect, students would have a choice of enrolling in either YRS or traditional school, at seven elementary campuses. Currently, the only traditional program at the elementary level is offered at Gird; while a small traditional plan is offered at Ramona Junior High and Don Lugo High School.

As one parent put it, "The reason we don't send kids to traditional school now (at Gird) is they'd be bused across town. Give them a chance to have traditional at their own neighborhood school."

VanderPoel's plan would make YRS voluntary, even though Schools Supt. Royce Lapp has estimated only 12 per cent of the students at each school would choose the traditional program.

The new scheduling system would allow the traditional plan at schools only if a reasonable number of students want it, trustees agreed.

The plan which received a unanimous vote, applies only to kindergarten through eighth grade youngsters, or nine schools, including the two junior highs. A decision on Don Lugo — whether to remain on YRS or revert to traditional—will be made before May 1, trustees said.

In approving VanderPoel's motion, the board scrapped a plan offered at last Tuesday's meeting by trustee Roy Ward which would in effect, drop YRS at five district schools. These included El Rancho, Marshall, Los Serranos, Magnolia Junior High and Don Lugo.

The option would team schools that are located near each other—placing one completely on YRS and another on a traditional plan.

But after trustees heard from a number of persons Friday night—the majority of whom seemed to favor YRS—they scrapped the option.

Originally, Lapp had offered four options: continuing the existing YR^5 program, establishing traditional on each campus, teaming schools (adding traditional programs to three more campuses), and reverting completely back to traditional program.

YRS has been controversial since its inception as a pilot program in the 1973-74 school year, and the divisiveness in the district was evident Friday as each person addressed the board.

Several Magnolia teachers, who strongly favored YRS, called on the board to retain the program. "Teachers are united in their feeling YRS should be retained," said Paul Hamilton.

One parent, who indicated she favored a traditional plan, said "We feel we made our voices heard at the polls March 4." Trustees Ward and Lyle Briggs, who ran on an anti-YRS platform, were elected on that ballot.

Riley Ramsey, who said he was speaking for 76 per cent of the Walnut teachers, strongly favored YRS. "Kids get restless during the long summer vacation, and YRS regulates a more continuous learning program."

John West, a Don Lugo teacher, said YRS offers "the greatest opportunity year-round for youngsters." His remarks were followed by loud applause.

Dr. Bruce Lynch, a former Chino councilman, challenged the board to place the issue on a public ballot "where everyone can vote." Its foolish to change programs now before a vote."

Fae Lamb, secretary for Citizens for Improved Education (CIE), anti-YRS group, said "We're not asking to give up YRS, but those who like it have had their chance. We'd like a chance at traditional."

Several speakers suggested that the March 4 election was not a vote against YRS. If it had been placed as a separate issue on the ballot, results might have been different, said John Warren.

And Mary Ellen Morrison, a student, asked the board not to "use students as pawns for political gain."

Man held in holdup of Ontario resident

Ontario police have arrested a 23-year-old man and charged him with strong arm robbery of a billfold containing $180. Booked into West End Sheriff's jail was Robert Thomas Smithson, arrested at 439 S. Campus Ave., Ontario. Police said Smithson wore a red wig when he went to the cabin apartment of Henry H. O'Neal, 84, of 684 E. State St., asked for money, and when refused, knocked O'Neal to the floor, put an arm around O'Neal's neck in a choker hold and took a billfold from his rear pocket. Police also arrested Smithson on $687 in outstanding traffic warrants.

Bail was set at $25,000.

PBX, boat safety courses offered

PBX receptionist and sail boat safety are two new courses being offered by the Claremont Adult education office.

Both courses will be taught at Claremont High School.

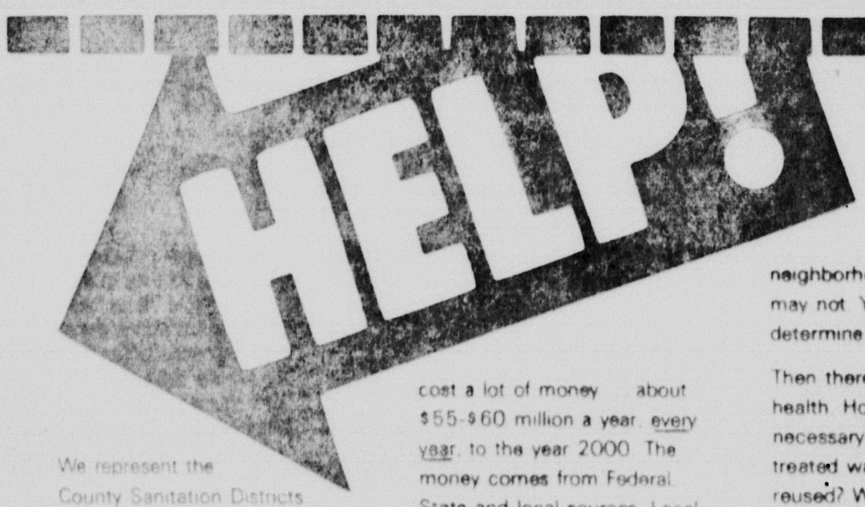
All phases of PBX, APABX, and EPABX will be included in the PBX Receptionist class starting Wednesday, April 30 at 6:45 p.m. at Room 709.

The course in sail boat safety will begin tonight at 6:45 in Room 811 for nine weeks, with students spending a day later aboard a 30-foot sloop putting into practice what they have learned.

Arabs say assassin didn't act alone

WASHINGTON (AP) — Knowledgeable Arab officials now say that Saudi Arabian King Faisal's accused assassin may not have acted alone.

Their suspicion differs from the account given by the Saudi Arabian government immediately after last month's slaying. But these officials would not give details of the reasons for their changed view.



We represent the County Sanitation Districts. And we need your help.

Our job is to collect, treat and dispose of wastewater. We operate one of the largest sewerage systems in the country. And we like to think we operate it so well you never have to think about it . . . or us.

But now we have a new challenge. To plan our future operations — to the year 2000. Why is it a challenge? Because of new, tougher water quality standards and the ever-increasing amount and complexity of sewage.

Our plan will have to balance jobs vs. inflation; water quality vs. energy consumption; recycling vs. wasting; public health vs. recreation. Touchy subjects. And those are just for openers.

We want your help in planning for the future. We're proposing alternatives that could directly affect you and your community. All of them have economic impacts. Environmental impacts. Social impacts. Impacts upon public health.

Impacts. Upon you. The practical alternatives will cost a lot of money . . . about $55-$60 million a year, every year, to the year 2000. The money comes from Federal, State and local sources. Local sources . . . that's you. You'll pay, as you do now, through assessments on your home. Only you'll pay more. And we think if you're going to pay more you may want to help in planning what it is you're going to pay for.

But we're not just talking about money. We treat wastewater, polluted water. How much we treat it, where we treat it, and what we do with it, effect your environment. We want your help in determining how to balance environmental impacts.

Our alternatives have social considerations. They may have an effect upon population and property values in your own neighborhood. Then again, they may not. You can help us determine this.

Then there's public health. Your health. How much treatment is necessary? What do we do with treated wastewater? Can it be reused? What effect might it have on people? Tough questions. And the answers are important to you.

A wastewater plan for 1975-2000 has not yet been recommended. We want your help in forming that recommendation. It's your chance to be informed. To be heard before decisions are reached.

We're not asking you to join anything. We're appealing to your community awareness. And we've set up a Workshop Program so you can voice your opinions.

There's no obligation. Except the one you have to yourself. It's your community . . . your concern.

Hero tow truck driver commended posthumously

A Pomona man who lost his own life in saving another person has been awarded posthumously the California Highway Patrol's Certificate of Commendation.

The certificate was presented to his widow during a ceremony at A & A Towing Service facility in Pomona where the husband was employed when killed.

Victor Macchioni, 24, the father of two children, was assisting a stranded motorist on the Orange Freeway Feb. 15 when he saw an oncoming truck drifting toward them.

He hurled the motorist from the truck's path and was then crushed himself between the truck-trailer and his own tow truck.

The stranded driver, Alan G. Gray, 25, of Tustin, was struck by the trailer and suffered a broken leg, shattered kneepcap and numerous other injuries.

The ceremony later was repeated at Doctors Hospital in Montclair where Gray is undergoing treatment for his injuries.

The certificate states: "This award is presented posthumously in recognition of Mr. Victor Macchioni's lifesaving actions on Feb. 15, 1975. While assisting a disabled motorist on the Orange Freeway north of Sunset Crossing Road, Mr. Macchioni observed an approaching truck drive off the freeway toward them. Without regard for his own safety, he shouted a warning and physically pushed the motorist from the direct path of the truck. For this courageous and heroic deed, Mr. Macchioni made the ultimate sacrifice for his fellow man."

Capt. Jones later announced that he also had recommended Mr. Macchioni for the Andrew Carnegie national award which is given annually for heroism.

"Truly we have here a case where an individual went far beyond that of what could be expected in saving the life of another," said Jones.

Mrs. Macchioni wept during both ceremonies and had a brief chat with Gray at the hospital. Her children, Mario, 4, and Sheresa, 2, did not attend.

Gray said he has been unable to walk since the accident. He was a patient at Pomona Valley Community Hospital for some time and later was transferred to Casa Colina Hospital. He developed complications and was taken to Montclair hospital.

Upon his release from the hospital he plans to return to Casa Colina to continue his rehabilitative program of learning to walk.

Gray, who was employed as a civilian worker at the El Toro Marine Base, declined to discuss the traffic accident.

AWARD TO HERO'S WIDOW

Mrs. Mary Macchioni receives a California Highway Patrol certificate of commendation which gives tribute to her husband, Victor, who was killed while acting to save the life of a stranded motorist on the Orange Freeway. The presentation by CHP Capt. W. C. Jones is observed by Allen Gray of Tustin, in hospital bed, who was pushed by the husband. He was also struck by the truck which killed Mr. Macchioni.

New X-ray schedule

Due to staffing problems at the West End Health Center, chest x-rays will be available Monday only from 1 to 4:30 p.m.

Women answer man's ad to bear test tube baby

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Several woman have responded to a Sunday school teacher's newspaper ad offering up to $10,000 to anyone who will bear his baby by artificial insemination, then turn over the child.

The San Francisco Chronicle reported Saturday that it received a number of phone calls from interested women. One said she simply enjoyed having children, another said she frankly needed the money, a third said she wouldn't take a penny.

"I would refuse the $10,000 on moral grounds, but I would have his child, since I feel strongly that this man is entitled to have that child," said a 29-year-old Castro Valley divorcee who said she is a law student, a mother of three and a Mormon.

She was responding to a classified advertisement which said: "Childless husband with infertile wife wants test tube baby. English or Northwestern European background. Indicate fee and age. All answers confidential."

The man who placed the ad Friday asked that his name not be used but explained that he was the last in his family line and wanted the child so the line would not die. "I'm a very moral man," he said in a telephone interview. "I don't want to meet the woman face to face, much less have sexual relations with her."

When informed about responses to his ad, the man expressed joy and said, "I didn't know there were people in the world like that anymore."

Asked how many applicants he would review before making his choice, he said, "Why, just one should be enough."

A mother of four from Lafayette said, "I just enjoy having children. I'm very fertile and my husband thinks it's okay. And while money doesn't make any difference, if he's posting $10,000, that could help in the college fund for my kids."

But she added, "I would want to start the pregnancy in June so the birth would be in March, and that way I wouldn't miss any tennis lessons."

A 20-year-old mother of two said she currently was on welfare and needed the money. In justifying her response, she claimed she could find at least two precedents in the Old Testament for a substitute mother being employed to provide a childless family with an heir or heiress.

A woman from Montebello in Southern California said she and her husband had children by previous marriages but her husband has since undergone a vasectomy. "He wants to see a child born," she said. "I'd like to see the man who placed the ad to pay for the medical expenses, but otherwise I'd do it for free. I'm thinking of my husband."

An unmarried, 27-year-old Beverly Hills woman, who identified herself as a former Chicago school teacher, said she now is an unemployed educational film producer and "financially, it could help me.

"But I'm really interested anyway, and I wouldn't find it morally disrupting," she said. "I would have to keep my mind open to the fact that it would be his child afterwards, and not mine — but I'm no kook. I could do it."

What's in store for South Vietnam after the fall?

SAIGON (AP) — Buffeted by a storm of bad news, Saigon's three million people are counting down the hours to what many believe will be South Vietnam's last stand against the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese.

Confidence was shattered by the sudden collapse of three quarters of their country late last month and early this month, and the capture by Communist-led forces of Phnom Penh, capital of neighboring Cambodia.

Now the Saigonese watch foreigners fleeing the city in gathering haste, and hear well-founded rumors of embassies burning documents.

Experienced observers say that in 15 years of war, the capital city has never seemed more vulnerable, or the people more resigned to defeat.

On the eve of what appears to be the climactic confrontation of the Vietnamese war, here is how experienced observers assess developments:

— That the chance for ousting President Nguyen Van Thieu in time for a negotiated settlement that might save the country from complete Communist rule has slipped by.

— That the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese have opted for military victory, and might seek this with an explosive "Tet-like" attack by infiltrators and commandos against key parts of Saigon, backed by conventional assaults on the remaining government strongholds in the countryside — much in the style of the countrywide assault by the Communist side during the Tet holiday in 1968.

— That Saigon's remaining armed forces are willing to fight if well led, as the bloody continuing battle at the provincial capital of Xuan Loc indicates, but no longer have the firepower or manpower to hold for more than a few weeks once the main battle starts.

— That the pattern of an initial orderly takeover of power by Communist cadres seen in Phnom Penh and captured Vietnamese cities will probably be repeated in Saigon, but with no assurance that feared widespread purges and executions will not take place afterward.

First reports of life behind the lines in the captured Vietnamese coastal cities have indicated a benign Communist presence. Government officials were asked to return to their regular jobs, and few Communist soldiers were visible.

However, reports surfaced in recent days by the U.S. Embassy in Saigon quote witness accounts of macabre slayings, including the execution outside the Citadel in Hue of a government censor, and the ceremonial beheading of a moderate political leader, Nguyen Ba Sau, 60, in the Chon Con market in Da Nang, after which his head "was hoisted to the highest place and left there," and the stoning to death of government officials elsewhere in Da Nang.

There was no confirmation of these reports.

Vietnamese who escaped from Communist-occupied cities have told Associated Press reporters they witnessed none of these incidents.

A nurse who slipped out of Nha Trang last Wednesday night in a boat said the only dead she saw were hanging from the gates of the hospital where she worked. She claimed they were executed by the new government April 9 for robbery.

Whether or not executions have in fact taken place, the Vietnamese in the occupied areas seem eager to leave for Saigon. The Nha Trang nurse said, "I have been taught to hate the Communists, to fear them.

"The North Vietnamese soldiers who directed traffic in the streets of Nha Trang asked me why so many people wanted to run," the nurse said. "I told them we fear the Viet Cong because violence has always followed them."

All roads lead to Saigon, and those fortunate to make their way past the barricades believe they have found ultimate safety in the capital city. It is a false hope.

"The city is so filled with rumors and tension that an ill-timed hiccup could blow the lid off," commented a French correspondent of long residence.

To help keep the lid on, the U.S. Embassy has been downplaying its escalated withdrawal program. While the U.S. government was making it known around Washington that the American presence would be reduced to fewer than 1,000 in Saigon within a week, the director of the U.S. Information Service, Alan Carter, was inviting Vietnamese in a Saigon telvision interview to visit his home "where nothing whatsoever has been packed." Many viewers were not impressed.

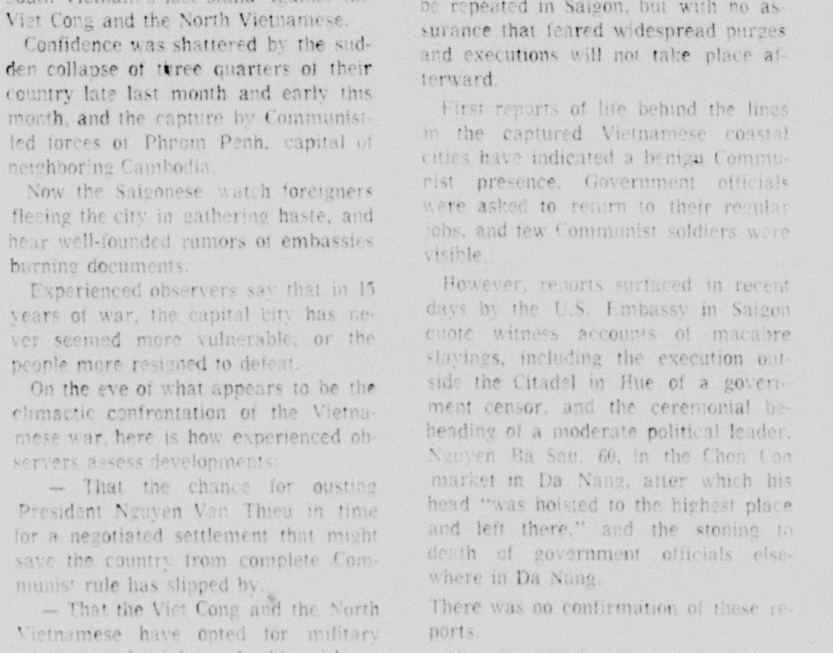
Military analysts believe the Saigon defense forces might be able to stop the commandos and infiltrators in the capital. But it might be another story outside the city where U.S. intelligence reports say the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese have amassed large forces — elements of 10 to 12 infantry divisions, possibly as many as 100,000 regulars, the largest number ever assembled in the region. And they have modern weaponry and tanks, and are flush with victory in the north.

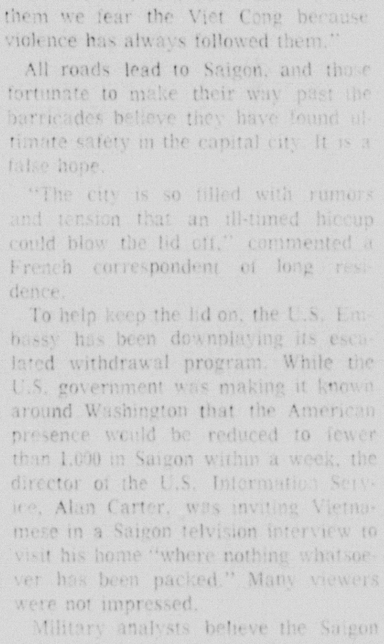
Opposing them on the government side will be the smallest number of defenses assembled in years because of the reverses in the north, around 30,000 regulars backed up with local militiamen, and a weakening air force. In the inexorable arithmetic of war, the South Vietnamese seem the obvious losers.

Is there any way out?

One of the anti-Communist opposition leaders in Saigon, lawyer Tran Van Tuyen, believes there is. President Thieu resigns, and a Saigon government acceptable to the Communist side negotiates a coalition that will cushion South Vietnam's change from anti-Communist bastion to peaced country.

Tuyen served in a coalition government with Ho Chi Minh in Hanoi in 1945 and regrets the encounter. His party was soon purged. But Tuyen said recently that anything is better than military defeat, and he believes a coalition is worth trying again.





KITTY CAT DILEMMAS

Pregnant kitty (left photo) got herself into this precarious predicament this week in Ontario as she tried to walk across a West End General Telephone Co. cable. Despite efforts of Andy Riebli who climbed atop a garage and attempted to reach the cat with a ladder, move to reach kitty failed and she fell to the ground unhurt shortly after picture was snapped. Clear across the nation in Wellford, N.C., Robin Daves, 10, hugs her cat "Pooh." Robin's parents, the Rev. and Mrs. James Daves, gave Pooh away a year ago when they moved from Newman, Ga., 200 miles to Wellford, N.C. Pooh stayed only an hour with his new family, then disappeared. He turned up at the Daves' home this week 12 months later. Robin recognized him by a scar and a black spot on his side.

White collar crime costing us billions

WASHINGTON (AP) — White-collar crime is evidently costing Americans billions of dollars more per year than violent or street crime, yet there is no comprehensive effort to keep track of it.

Despite public attention given in recent years to high-level officials corruption, massive stock frauds and other illegal activities, federal agencies concerned with crime are making few attempts to study white-collar crime, its magnitude or effects.

Estimates of the cost of crime of all types range as high as $50 billion a year and the offenses loosely grouped in the "white collar" category account for perhaps four-fifths of this.

And it is widely agreed among law enforcement officials that white-collar crime — such as fraud, embezzlement, bribery, stock theft and manipulation, kickbacks, pilferage, tax evasion and computer-related schemes — is growing.

There are signs now of a growing official response to the white-collar crime problem, some of it perhaps the result of pressure from critics who believe too much emphasis has been given to street crime.

At the Justice Department, a task force is being organized to address the over-all problem of white-collar crime, according to department officials.

The effort is the result of a decision by recently appointed Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi, sources said, and is spurred partly by increased concern over massive frauds involving both corporate and federal money.

"We've always fought white-collar crime, but the committee approach is a new one," said one official. He added that focusing on the more sophisticated forms of white-collar crime was likely to strain departmental resources to a point where some lesser cases will lose priority. But by emphasizing cooperation with state and local officials it was hoped these will not "fall through the cracks," he said.

The security chief at one major government agency said he welcomed the Justice Department's heightened interest in white-collar crime.

He said he was particularly encouraged by a Justice Department decision to beef up its Criminal Division's fraud section with increased staff and a more direct involvement in prosecuting cases.

"It's my view based on experience that there were many cases so difficult to make that the U.S. attorneys were not interested in trying," he said. "And sometimes they were just too lazy."

Foreshadowing this proposed new drive on white-collar crime was the FBI's annual report for 1974 which said there had been a "dramatic rise" in offenses of the genre within its jurisdiction.

The cost of white collar crime 'dwarfs' that of street crime."
—FBI Director Clarence Kelley.

The FBI says there has been a 30 per cent increase in convictions for white collar crime since mid-1972 and FBI Director Clarence Kelley was quoted as saying the cost of white-collar crime "dwarfs" that of street crime.

His remark recalled a similar statement, in almost identical words, by former President Lyndon B. Johnson eight years earlier.

However, the FBI's own Uniform Crime Reports are indicative of how white-collar crime has been ignored, critics say. These much-ballyhooed reports, based on data collected from local police across the nation, cover only certain types of street and violent crime. Consumer frauds, embezzlements, bribery and other crimes in business and government are not mentioned.

The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, another Justice Department agency, has a $1.4 million white-collar crime project with the National District Attorneys Association but makes no effort to obtain comprehensive statistical data in return for its support.

A recently published Department of Commerce booklet titled "The Cost of Crime Against Business" gives a total figure of $20.6 billion for 1974, up from a "conservative estimate" of $15.7 billion in 1972. This survey mixes some white-collar crimes — such as pilferage, bad checks and credit card frauds — together with burglary, robbery, vandalism and other street-type crimes. But it excludes embezzlement and other white-collar offenses. The booklet says that the only comprehensive study of the cost of crime in the United States was in 1931, and except for what the criminal justice system itself costs, "the lack of knowledge ... is almost as great today."

It reports the loss to banks from credit card frauds in 1973 was about $420 million.

Business in general lost $2 billion to bad checks, of which $300 million affected banks, it says. Meanwhile, a continuing increase in internal bank crime — employe embezzlements and so forth — has pushed annual losses from $14.1 million in 1963 to $25.6 million in 1973, the booklet says.

The last figure, it has been reported elsewhere, is six times the amount of money — $22 million — taken by bank robbers in the same year.

The Census Bureau has its own crime statistics branch which uses "victimization" surveys to record crime data on a national and selected-city basis. But like the FBI's, these are all crimes against persons and property.

Robert P. Parkinson, who directs the operation, said a pilot project to tabulate white-collar crime data was tried in the late 1960s but was abandoned because information gathered was incomplete and therefore meaningless.

In trying to determine losses from employe pilferage, for example, it was found that most businesses had no way of separating this from shoplifting losses. "We found in general that white-collar crime does not lend itself to measurement by survey techniques," said Parkinson.

The simple matter of defining white-collar crime has proved baffling to many attempts at statistical analysis, authorities said.

White collar crime . . .

Pilferage of a company's inventory might be considered plain larceny, or it might be white-collar crime, particularly if accompanied by manipulation of records to conceal the losses.

A three-fold increase in business arson within the past 15 years.

Arson is a "street" crime [illegible] increasingly, [illegible] insurance industry journals, it is being used as a means of defrauding insurance companies or obtaining phony tax writeoffs.

One recent study by the Stanford Research Institute claims a three-fold increase in the rate of "deliberate burnings" in the last 15 years and the Insurance Crime Prevention Institute (ICPI), an investigative body supported by more than 70 casualty insurance companies indicates that arson is being used for these purposes.

Other crimes that can be defined both ways, depending on the circumstances, are bad checks, credit card frauds and cargo theft.

The ICPI was established by insurance firms in 1969 after the losses from insurance fraud had risen to more than $1 billion annually, the organization says.

It claims now to have sharply cut into this problem through its own investigations, the results of which are turned over to legal authorities for prosecution. But its scorecard is based on arrests, rather than convictions, so the results are not entirely clear. There were 433 arrests in 1974, compared to 221 in the previous year, ICPI says.

Government agencies which try to keep track of white-collar crime through their own statistical methods admit their results too, are imprecise.

The Securities and Exchange Commission, whose function is to watch over the stock market and pursue criminal fraud wherever possible, has seen the number of cases referred to the Justice Department for prosecution about double over the past three years.

Its figures show 67 persons indicted and 75 convicted in 1972, 178 indicted and 83 convicted in 1973, and 169 indicted and 81 convicted last year.

But Ira Pearce, general counsel of the SEC's Enforcement Division, said the figures don't necessarily show a jump in criminal activity per se, only that more criminals have been caught for one reason or another.

In any event, he said, only the "most horrendous" cases ever get to the Justice Department for prosecution and most of these are a year or two old then.

Securities frauds, like many other types of crime, are hard to detect because it often is difficult for even the victims to know a crime has been committed. The use of computers to manipulate and conceal records of fraudulent dealings is a relatively new but increasingly difficult problem.

"It's not as if you come into your place of business and find the safe blasted open and a hole in the roof, the sort of evidence that would suggest something isn't quite right," he said.

Pearce said a current problem for the SEC, perhaps related to the recession, is an apparent upward trend in unusual securities, investments in such things as condominiums, tank cars, whiskey warehouses and the like — schemes which frequently are promoted outside the normal market channels monitored by the agency.

Mail fraud is another major element in white-collar crime but because it is often used as a catch-all against individuals not easily prosecuted on other charges, figures don't mean much.

The Postal Service says, in fact, that convictions for mail fraud actually declined from 1,536 in 1973 to 1,394 in 1974.

Shop donates goods to poor

NOTTINGHAM, England (AP) — Roman Catholic Bishop Edward Ellis has opened a shop which gives away goods to people in need. Help is not restricted to Catholics and no payment is asked for. In its first week the shop helped nearly 200 families.

The shop is run by the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, which makes appeals for goods, mostly furniture, clothing and crockery.

Portrait of a city's crime, poverty, decay

EDITOR'S NOTE — In the 1950s East St. Louis, Ill., was designated an All-American City. Today it is ridden with crime, poverty and decay.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP) — Poverty, population decline and corruption threaten to strangle this Mississippi River city's major hope for its future — the education of its children.

School District 189, with 20,000 students the fifth-largest in Illinois, is on the threshold of political and financial bankruptcy and may soon become the first in Illinois ever taken over by state authorities.

The decay of the school parallels the decay of the city itself. Factories and businesses have closed, 10,000 jobs have vanished in a decade, the crime rate is one of the highest in the nation, and the downtown area is a collection of vacant lots and decaying buildings.

Abandoned warehouses dot the East St. Louis shoreline, directly across the Mississippi River from the giant Gateway Arch that symbolizes urban revival for St. Louis, Mo.

In this "backyard city," however, less than 50 per cent of the 20,000 buildings are classified by the Building Department as sound for occupancy. There is no new construction. Empty, partially destroyed buildings are everywhere.

An official in the office of Dr. Joseph Cronin, state superintendent of education, says: "We are checking to see if we have the authority to take over the schools. We assume that we could on an emergency basis, forcing a court test of our authority."

Meanwhile, Cronin is sending 10 state specialists in education and finance and management to prop up the school district. The state "will pump millions of additional dollars into East St. Louis in the next two years," Cronin says.

Four of the school district's seven board members — Charles Merritts, Fred Kimbrough, Harry Tharp and Roosevelt Peabody — have been indicted on federal charges of extortion, fraud and perjury in connection with alleged kickbacks on contracts let by the board.

Merritts is a businessman who has grown powerful recently in Democratic politics in St. Clair County. Kimbrough is a former black activist who until recently was a high official of the state community college. That school also is being investigated by federal officials.

Peabody is director of the St. Clair County Economic Opportunity Commission and Tharp is city building commissioner.

Merritts, the school board president, has also been charged with offering an undercover FBI agent $2,500 to murder Clyde C. Jordan, a fellow board member who had been critical of the Merritts administration.

Until the 1950s, East St. Louis was a thriving city of more than 82,000 people about half black and half white.

School Bankruptcy: white.

William E. Mason, the school system superintendent, won election this month as mayor of East St. Louis. Mason ran as a Democrat and defeated Mayor James E. Williams who had sought reelection on a reform ticket. But the change in administrations is not likely to solve the school system's problems.

The teachers, demanding salary increases, have been promised one for next year, although school officials say they don't know where the extra money will come from. The teachers now average less than $10,000 annually.

One city official, Commissioner Elmo Bush, said he believes a bigger problem is the lack of teaching supplies.

"How can the teachers teach art without art supplies, shop without tools or chemistry or physics without materials for experiments? It's just a shame," said Bush, who ran for mayor in this month's election.

Rich Roth, president of the East St. Louis teachers union, says he hears many complaints about the schools' physical plants.

"Teachers in some of the schools tell us the buildings are infested with rats and insects," Roth said. "And in some places paint and plaster are falling from the walls and the plumbing doesn't work. How can you teach in an environment like that?"

Age and increasing vandalism have taken their toll on many of the buildings. Several schools were closed during periods of cold weather this year because the heating plants didn't work.

Voters approved $8 million in bond issues for the schools during the 1960s, but, because of the city's unfavorable financial condition, buyers cannot be found for the bonds.

State officials are reluctant to commit themselves to state takeover of the system. "It would have to get pretty bad before we did that," Cronin said.

But officials agree that another state option, stripping the district of its accredita-

African drought ends but not the crisis

EDITOR'S NOTE — In the aftermath of a seven-year drought that claimed more than 100,000 lives in West Africa, a half-dozen nations are trying to get back on their economic feet. But some people, faithful to their Moslem beliefs, think it's all in the hands of Allah.

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

NIAMEY, Niger (AP) — The rains have returned, the harvest has been good if subnormal, and mass starvation has been averted in the six nations that rim the Sahara's southern edge. But the drought crisis is far from over.

Rescued by a massive international relief effort that delivered more than a million tons of food, the herdsmen and subsistence farmers of the Sahel have for the most part left the refugee camps and are drifting north again to a wasteland of dead and dying trees dotted with the bleached bones of their decimated herds.

Seven years of drought in the two million square miles of the Sahel — Arabic for edge — where the desert meets West Africa's sparse savannas of brushland, and a half century of land mismanagement and overgrazing have wrought enormous disruptions in the lives of the 20 million inhabitants of Mauritania, Mali, Niger, Chad, Senegal and Upper Volta.

The terrible drought and its accompanying diseases claimed more than 100,000 lives and killed off 35 to 50 per cent of the cattle. But somehow the locusts, army worms, jackels, hyenas and other predators managed to survive and even increase.

The camel and donkey firewood caravans now must travel farther into the scarce, extensively damaged wooded areas where trees were felled in desperation so the dying goats could reach the top leaves.

Women of the Sahel walk longer, dustier miles with huge water jugs on their heads to find the wells now swallowed up by the encroaching desert sands no longer held in place by the scraggly trees.

Driven out by the cattle that invaded the game preserves, West Africa's wildlife populations of lion, antelope, leopard and elephant are heading farther south in wrenched retreat into Togo and Dahomey. Giraffes converging on the few and widely dispersed water holes now fall easy prey to the waiting poachers who sell the meat to Arab butchers.

Fishing has been severely crippled in the rivers of the Sahel, badly affected by silting up when low flow during the drought permitted the ocean to back up into the dry beds.

Enough food has been stockpiled throughout the Sahel to see the people through another growing season, but the fourfold increase in oil prices has cut such necessities as pesticides, fertilizers and fuel for the tractors, irrigation pumps and trucks bringing firewood beyond their reach.

Rain in the Sahel has always been a sometime thing: a good rainy season would be 10 heavy rains of 15 to 20 minutes duration from July to September. The most important for the millet crop that sustains both cattle and people is the final two rains of the season. In recent years, the rains came late and ended early.

The West African heads of state, at a planning meeting a year and a half ago, estimated $500 million was needed for long-range development of this chronically impoverished corner of the world. A number of planning and climatological studies have been launched, but the bulk of the money is nowhere in sight.

"The huge relief push averted mass starvation," said Jim Eastman, director of the U.S. Peace Corps in Nigeria. "Getting the people back on their feet and back even to their fragile way of life is something else."

The United States, which contributed about half the food and more than half the funds to the worldwide relief operation, has budgeted some $5 million in short-term aid projects in the Sahel over the next three harvest seasons. These include programs to save the date palm trees, encourage small agricultural cooperatives to increase millet and sorghum yields, fence off grasslands against predators, dig wells and irrigation canals, and a reforestation plan for West Africa's "tree of life." It is the goa tree, which gives shade to the crops, holds back the sand, provides forage for the cattle and, as a legume, fixes nitrogen in the soil to increase millet and sorghum yields, fence off grasslands against predators, dig wells and irrigation canals, and a reforestation plan for West Africa's "tree of life." It is the goa tree, which gives shade to the crops, holds back the sand, provides

"The camels live on these trees," said Peace Corps forester Dennis Pantzer of Spokane, Wash., examining a recently planted shoot in a forest outside Niamey, the capital of Niger. "When the herdsmen cut them down during the worst of the drought, it was hard to convince them they were cutting off their own future here in the Sahel."

Agronomists and rangeland experts are no longer convinced that the Sahara is moving south by reasons of wind and changing weather patterns at the rate of 30 or 100 miles each decade. A recent meeting of 65 cattle and range experts from 16 countries at Bamako in Mali concluded that it was men, who created the advancing wasteland with reckless overgrazing.

"Since before World War II, modern veterinary medicine and pest control have brought a vast increase in the goat and cattle population," said a British agronomist returning from the Bamako conference. "The French and the British colonial administrators saw the problem coming, but they were getting out in the wave of independence. They hoped the new governments would do something, but unfortunately they had other economic woes."

In political repercussions of the drought, the government of Niger was overthrown and 100,000 people and half the cattle died

SAHARA ADVANCE — This oasis village in Arat, Maurentania, is a fragile outpost against the implacable advance of the Sahara's sands. Land mismanagement and seven years of drought have allowed desert to move steadily southward.

replaced by a military regime amid charges of corruption in distributing relief supplies. Chad for a time refused to accept U.S. aid after accusations of corruption and inept handling of relief aid appeared in American newspapers, and Mali and Upper Volta are still making war-like noises in a boundary dispute over water rights.

Governments have talked of banning goats in favor of cattle, of replacing camels which eat the root systems of the trees, with Land Rovers — highly unlikely at today's gasoline prices — and forbidding the huge religious celebrations that bring nomads by the thousands with their camels and goat herds to the few remaining water holes.

The people themselves rearely blame the governments for their problems or pay much attention to official advice. Faithful to their fatalistic Moslem beliefs, they accept what Allah sends, and in most cases, cannot even be persuaded to store food for themselves or the cattle against a future emergency.

"When food is available, dry milk or sorghum, they eat themselves sick," sighed an American missionary who has worked four years among the desert nomads. "When it's gone, they sit in the shade and wait for Allah to provide. Two died last fall against that wall there."

Suicides going up

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer

Suicide prevention centers across the country report an apparent increase in suicide and suicidal behavior as a result of the faltering economy.

Nationwide statistics haven't been collected yet, but a spokesman for the National Institute of Mental Health in Washington says a partial survey indicates that the annual suicide rate is above 12 per 100,000 population, compared with 10 per 100,000 annually in the 1960s. In 1932, at the height of the Great Depression, there were 17.4 suicides per 100,000.

"We have noticed an increase, a decided increase in suicidal deaths due to financial pressure and unemployment, as well as in suicidal thoughts and attempts," said Dr. Bruce Danto, a psychiatrist who heads the Suicide Prevention and Drug Information Center in Detroit, hard hit by auto industry layoffs.

Danto's observations were echoed at suicide prevention centers in Nashville, Tenn.; Atlanta, Ga.; Gainesville, Fla.; San Mateo, Calif.; Boston, New York, and other cities.

"The suicidal calls have increased ... whether it's thoughts or threats," said Pat Higginbotham of the Nashville center. And since about October, she said, "The type or profile of the caller who is suicidal is changing somewhat."

The new caller, she said, is the blue-collar worker recently laid off at nearby plants — a man with two cars, a mortgage, one or two college-age children, a wife who has never been without a job before.

Several psychiatrists said these observations, if confirmed later by hard statistics, bear out the classical theory of suicide formulated by psychologist Emil Durkheim at the turn of the century.

According to the theory, suicides tend to decrease during a war, when people join together in a common cause, but increase at a time of economic crisis when society becomes fragmented.

"A lot of people's identity is wrapped up in their jobs," said Dr. Perry Ottenberg, a psychiatrist at the University of Pennsylvania. "Take the job away and you've taken away their security and self esteem ... This is commonly followed by guilt. The sad part is a responsible person who loses a job blames himself."

Ronfeldt Chorale to sing

Two contrasting sacred numbers, Victoria's "Victamae Paschali Laudes" and J. S. Bach's "Gott is mein Sonn und Schield," will be featured in a concert by the Louis Ronfeldt Chorale in Bridges Hall, Pomona College, at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

This is the chorus' fifth annual "in appreciation" concert for friends, sponsors and patrons. Tickets are $2 general $1 students, $10 patron, $25 sponsor, and $50-$100 sustaining. Tickets are tax deductible.

The concert will also include 11 short romantic works, "Gypsy Love Songs" by Brahms, featuring pianist Kathreen Prout, and four lyrical choruses from Vaughn Williams' opera, "In Windsor Forest."

Also on the program are a chorus from Strauss' "Die Fledermaus"; selections from Willson's "The Music Man"; songs from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," featuring soprano Mildred Herkelrath and baritone Kenneth Orr; and "The Streets of Laredo," with baritone John Whitham as soloist.

The concert will be repeated in Pasa Robles at 8 p.m. Friday and on the Tulare-Visalia Community Concert Series at 2 p.m. next Sunday.

Alcoholism is covered by group insurance

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. (AP) — A recent survey of 17 insurance companies writing group disability insurance in the United States shows all of them will cover loss of income resulting from alcoholism.

The survey was made by the Health Insurance Institute.

But, says J. F. Follmann Jr., consultant of the institute, there is this proviso:

The alcoholic's condition should be medically recognized and the alcoholic must be placed under medical supervision. In line with this, the insurance policies state that disability benefits are not forth-coming until the alcoholic has agreed to undergo treatment to overcome his problem.

Once the benefits begin they continue as long as the insured continues rehabilitation treatment.

Ranks shrink

Spanish-American War vets

By JERRY T. BAULCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The day is rapidly approaching when the ranks of America's oldest veterans, those who fought in the Spanish-American war, will dwindle to fewer than 1,000. But many are still surprisingly spry.

All the states have Spanish-American war veterans, with California having the most by far, with 180.

Alaska, Delaware, Vermont and New Mexico each has only one Spanish-American war veteran still alive, according to VA records. Florida, with 80, has the second highest total behind California.

The Veterans Administration counted 1,008 Spanish-American war vets alive last month. That compares with 1,595 alive last July and 1,804 alive in July of 1973. There were 392,000 Americans who participated in the turn-of-the-century hostilities.

The oldest is believed to be 103-year-old Nelson Norton of Whitestown, Ind., whose 95-year-old brother, Everett, of Palestine, Ill., makes them the only known Spanish-American war brothers alive. Nelson lives with his 70-year-old daughter.

The youngest veterans of that war are probably 87 with the average around 95. There are 36 who are 100 years or older.

More than half require somebody to help them get around, but that's how the VA discovered many are still going strong.

All Spanish-American war vererans are entitled to VA pensions, and the agency set out last year to see if some who also might be entitled to a special aid-and-attendance allowance were not getting it.

Although many get that special allowance, the VA counselors found a 90-year-old vet skinning logs for two new cabins he was building at his hunting camp. He suggested he was in better shape than his visitors and got no argument on that score.

A 95-year-old brushed off VA officials, saying he is able to manage on his income, although he was worried about the state of the economy.

A 98-year-old informed that his situation warranted an increase in his monthly stipend turned to his wife of 59 years and said: "I'll take you dancing tonight" with the money.

The VA found one 99-year-old still working. He operates an elevator.

Another, age 98, had just returned from 18 holes of golf. He explained it helped restore his strength after a series of heart attacks and he mentioned that he is still "dating."

VA counselors shared lunch with a 95-year-old veteran who had given up his heating business only four years earlier. After lunch he crushed an empty beer can in his hand.

The VA says there are 24,381 widows of Spanish-American war veterans and 1,381 children receiving pensions. This compares with 29,783 widows and 1,464 children on June 30, 1973. The children draw pensions beyond the normal cutoff date at age 18 because of physical or mental inability to care for themselves.

The last Civil War veteran died in the 1950s but there are still 205 widows and 128 children on VA pension rolls. The last Indian wars veteran died in 1973 but there are 72 widows and 15 children on VA rolls.

Plane wreck skeleton identified

TEHACHAPI (AP)—A skeleton discovered in the wreckage of a light plane found near here over the weekend has been tentatively identified as that of Robert Wanamaker, one-time owner of El Monte Airport.

Authorities said Wanamaker, 66, was reported missing while flying from Carson City, Nev., to his home in Oceanside, in November 1972.

Arab socialism

A picture of political, economic contradiction

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Socialist Iraq is a picture of political and economic contraditions.

Politically, the ruling Baath party still leans far to the left as one of Moscow's most militant ally in the Arab world. Economically, it has turned to America, Europe and Japan for technology and consumer goods.

Biblical Mesopotamia is now the fourth largest oil producer in the Persian Gulf, with ambitious development schemes and money to pay for them. It is slightly larger than California, underpopulated by 10 million inhabitants and boasts a vast agricultural potential in the fertile Tigris and Euphrates valleys.

Iraq also has a history of bloody coups and repressive regimes since the overthrow and killing of British-dominated King Faisal II in 1958. A secret police apparatus that intimidates, arrests, tortures and executes its citizens has given Iraq an unsavory reportation abroad and frightened its Arab neighbors.

The current leadership, which toppled its predecessor in 1968, is anxious to change this image. Iraqi officials are beginning to open their doors to Western journalists, telling them it is a "free country" and they can write what they please. They seem to welcome criticism and discuss problems with remarkable candor.

Kasr al Nihaya, the notorious "Palace of the End" where political prisoners used to disappear, has been torn down. More Iraqis are allowed to travel abroad, and the government has replaced threats with incentives to generate public enthusiasm for nation building.

An Iraqi office worker still confesses that the height of his ambition is to "leave the country and buy an apartment in Beirut." The difference is that he now feels free enough to impart such heresy to a foreigner.

Winning week closes on a losing trend

NEW YORK (AP) —The stock market cracked an extended winning streak on Friday, posting its first loss in eight days.

Brokers said the decline was part of a normal pattern of a few days of losses after a long, sharp advance.

During the past eight sessions of advances, which began a week ago Wednesday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials chalked up an unusually large 76-point gain.

"The market's been so terribly strong that it's due for one or two days of correction," said Robert Wade of Drexel Burnham & Co.

"There are an awful lot of profits that can be taken."

Brokers noted that the market has resisted a downturn all week. Two or three times it tried to correct itself but came back into positive ground by the end of each day.

Some of the heaviest losers Friday were glamor electronic issues such as Texas Instruments, Digital Equipment, and Burroughs, which managed generous gains during the past week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 blue chip industrial stocks fell 11.03 to 808.43. Prices were lower for 884 stocks, nearly half of the total 1,840 stocks traded Friday on the New York Stock Exchange. Prices were higher for 545 issues and the remaining 411 stocks prices were unchanged.

Active stocks sales totaled 22.61 million shares and trading frequently ran ahead of the exchange's high speed ticker tape during the day. In the previous session, more than 32 million shares were traded, the third heaviest daily volume on record at the NYSE.

The broad-based NYSE composite index fell .45 to 45.75 and the American Stock Exchange market-value index dropped .39 to 83.41.

The most active stock again Friday was Polaroid despite a halt due to an order imbalance which kept the stock from trading during most of the day. Polaroid gained 1⅝ to 31 after a 2⅞-point gain the previous session when the company surprised Wall Street with higher-than-expected earnings.

It was followed by Pondorosa System, up 1 to 10 and Control Data, up 1¼ to 19. Ryder System rose ⅛ to 5⅜ and American Airlines, up ¼ to 9¼.

Texas Instruments plunged 7½ to 104, Burroughs fell 2 to 122, and Digital Equipment was down 3½ to 102¼.

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Mayday," the traditional radio distress call of pilots and sailors, is ringing through Wall Street with a different but compelling meaning this spring.

Is is the unofficial code word for the May 1 start of price competition in the securities industry, after almost 200 years of fixed minimum brokerage commissions on stock transactions.

For stockbrokers, it probably will mean new competitive pressures. And for the investor, it will mean the opportunity to shop for investment services just as people now shop for the least expensive television set or a life insurance policy.

The Securities and Exchange Commission decided last January to abolish fixed commissions to give investors the opportunity to obtain the lowest possible price.

The New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange, and most other exchanges around the country have set the minimum commissions brokers may charge on transactions. They range from half a per cent to 2 per cent on most trades, but the commissions on very large purchases or sales of stocks can be less than half a per cent. And the commission is as much as 10 per cent on very small transactions involving few shares.

Wall Street has been feeling its way toward Mayday. Few brokerage firms have indicated what might be charged once restrictions on commissions are removed on May 1.

"Anyone who tells you he knows exactly what's going to happen is mistaken," says Edward I. O'Brien, president of the Securities Industry Association, the brokers' trade group.

Besides price shopping, a customer also will have the opportunity for the first time to pay only for those brokerage house services he wants. Until now, part of every commission payment has gone toward the cost of research reports, safekeeping facilities for stock certificates and other brokerage house functions.

The changes raise the issue of survival.

"Is this going to drive hundreds of firms out of business, as some people have been saying? I don't think so," O'Brien maintains.

One executive of a large brokerage house, on the other hand, contends that the number of NYSE member firms could shrink by at least two-thirds from the current total of 500.

"Some people are saying there'll be as few as 50 eventual survivors" he says. "I think 50 is too low — but 150 may well be high."

"Hey, smarty, come here.'

His workers maintain only A and B averages

NUTLEY, N.J. (AP) — Frank Capalbo really means it when he calls out: "Hey smarty, come here."

Most of the young people Capalbo hires as part-time employes in his fruit basket business are honor students.

Of the five college students now working for Capalbo, four have A averages and the fifth has a B average. Four of his 10 high school student workers are on the honor roll at their schools.

"I do it on purpose," says Capalbo. "The smarter the kid, the harder the worker."

During holiday seasons, Capalbo hires about 50 students.

"The kids really run this place. They do all the different jobs, from bookkeeping to placing orders," he says.

Capalbo, 37, a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, has a master's degree in retailing from New York University. He awards scholarships to three of his college-bound helpers each year.

Capalbo likes to talk about his former employes.

"Two years ago, we had a kid who was No. 1 at Fordham. Another guy is the comptroller for one of this country's largest pharmaceutical firms," he says.

His current student employes say they like working for Capalbo.

"You learn pride, said Billy Smith, who is working on his master's in engineering at Fairleigh Dickinson University. "You never work harder than you do here, but you'll never learn as much anywhere else."

Sam Paparatto, a freshman math major at Seton Hall University with a grade average of 3.6 out of a possible 4 points, has worked for Capalbo nearly three years. He says it "is an excellent way to work your way through school. You learn a lot here."

Programa recreativo planeado para los jovenes de Chino

Un ambicioso plan para un programa que mantendra a los jovenes del barrio fuera de las calles, fue revelado el lunes en una reunion del Consejo de Accion Comunal de Chino.

Tambien hubo un a discusion acerca del hostigamiento por parte de la policia, en la reunion que duro tres horas, y atrajo un grupo de 130 personas a la sala de la Iglesia Catolica Nuestra Senora de Guadalupe.

El consejo, que ha estado buscando metodos de eliminar las peleas y violencia en el barrio, voto unanimamente a favor del programa recreativo.

Los miembros decidieron llev presentar la propuesta directamente al Concilio de la Ciudad, en vez de presentarla primero a la Comision Recreativa. El Rev. Manuel Guillen, pastor de Nuestra Senora de Guadalupe, y creador del programa, dijo que trataria de hacer la presentacion en la proxima reunion del Concilio.

El costo del programa que requiere la conversion del Gi Cafe en las calles 5 y D, en un centro recreativo, seria entre $25.000 y $45.000, de acuerdo al Padre Guillen.

El costo dependeria en la cantidad de dias que el centro estuviera abierto, y la cantidad de empleados requeridos.

No se ha establecido medios para la obtencion del dinero. El miembro del Consejo George Gonzalez, dijo que la Comision Recreativa pagaria parte de los gastos, pero no todos. Se sugirio que algunos miembros del consejo presentaran algun programa para la recaudacion de fondos.

El Padre Guillen dijo que su plan emplearia cinco personas, las cuales incluirian un director, asistente de direccion, supervisor de recreacion, supervisor de artes y obras, y un secretario, ademas de voluntarios. Los sueldos se estiman a $500 para el secretario, hasta $900 para el director.

Los empleados serian bilingues, deberan tener diploma de escuela secundaria, y poseer algun conocimiento de la "Historia y Cultura Chicana", dijo.

El alquiler del Gi Cafe seria de $250 mensuales, aproximadamente, a lo cual se deberia agregar el costo de servicios. El centro funcionaria cinco o siete dias por semana, de 13 a 21 horas. Las actividades incluirian juego de fronton, soccer y boxeo.

Algunas personas preguntaron si el centro deberia estar abierto despues de las 21 horas. "Tendria que estar abierto en las horas en que existen los problemas, o sea despues de las 21, especialmente para los jovenes de mas edad," dijo Daniel Gil.

Algunos de los padres no estaban de acuerdo. Dijeron que el proposito del centro era el de proveer actividades por un cierto tiempo, y despues hacer que los jovenes retornen a sus hogares, pero se referian a jovenes de menos edad.

Aun cuando el centro fue propuesto primordialmente para los jovenes mejico-americanos, se decidio ante la pregunta de uno de los concurrentes, que los Anglos no deberia ser excluidos.

Rudy Perchez, miembro de la pandilla Chino Sinners, pregunto si el concilio habia acabado las discusiones de hostigamiento policial.

El Consejal Martin Salgado le recordo que "el acosamiento viene de ambos lados. Si existe en el departamento de policia, haremos que se descontinue. Estamos trabajando con la policia en ese aspecto".

El oficial de policia Ed Acosta dijo que el acosamiento existe, pero" todos debemos unirnos y trabajar juntos para combatirlo".

Acosta dijo que el ha trabajado en los barrios por varios anos, especialmente en el este de Los Angeles, y "no le pido a nadie que guste a la policia. Pero yo no sere comprado ni vendido. Se ha probado."

El problema, de acuerdo a miembros de los Sinners, es que algunos policias son justos, pero otros "no se desvian de su amino." Tambien expresaron que los jovenes que son arrestados, no pueden mas tarde conseguir empleo.

"Usted, (Acosta) clama que es justo, pero yo no lo se." dijo Manny Martinez.

Victor Loza, otro joven dijo que Acosta no podia hablar por el departamento de policia en pleno. Se repitio constantemente, a pesar de la recriminacion del presidente. Salgado finalmente corto la discucion, ya que Loza no cesaba de hablar.

Mas tarde, Acosta dijo que su palabra representaba al Jefe Frank Meehan, y al departamento de policia, pero no ha todos los oficiales individualmente.

En una reunion anterior, varios padres criticaro a los miembros de pandillas. Una senora, hablando en espanol, dijo que los jovenes "no respetan a nadie. Es de preguntarse si tratan asi a sus padres. Esta es una reunion de la comunidad, se les deberia dar dos oportunidades de hablar, y nada mas. Si estan fuera de orden, se les deben negar la palabra."

Hay todavia cigarros de cinco centavos

New York (UPI) — "Lo que este pais ecesita es un buen cigarro de cinco centavos", dijo el vice-presidente Thomas R. Marshall en 1917. A pesar de la inflacion, hay todavia cigarros de cinco centavos, 58 anos mas tarde.

Los Fabricantes de igarros de America publica siete grupos de precios de cigarros y cigarrillos, incluyendo tres categorias de cigarros que cuestan cinco centavos o menos. Ya que los cinco centavos de 1917 tendrian un valor adquisitivo de diez centavos en 1975, el cigarro de lujo que cuesta ahora veinte centavos o mas, como el arrollado a mano, Royal Jamaican, solamente cuestan el doble que los cigarros de Marshall.

Monkey shortage endangers research

FREDERICK, Md. (AP) American scientists, facing a monkey shortage, have embarked on a plan to make the United States self-sufficient in the production of nonhuman primates for laboratory experimentation.

Speaking before the National Cancer Institute's Cancer Research Safety Symposium on problems in primate procurement, quarantine and research, Dr. Charles W. McPherson said foreign monkey supplies will be more costly and harder to obtain in the future.

McPherson, chief of the Animal Resources Branch of the National Institutes of Health, told the seminar at Ft. Detrick that a program is underway to reach an immediate goal of 50 per cent self-sufficiency in primate production by U.S. breeding facilities.

He said domestic production is now less than one third of the number used in American laboratories.

About 35,000-40,000 monkeys are imported annually from the Old World for laboratory use and 15,000-20,000 from Latin America, according to McPherson. He said most are caught in the wild.

This must change, he said, because of the destruction of wild monkey habitats, hunting monkeys for food, lower primate export quotas and wildlife conservation in traditional monkey-exporting countries.

Brazil, a large country rich in primates, has banned the export of wildlife, he said, and India has reduced its export quota for Rhesus monkeys from 50,000 to 30,000. America gets 15,000 of the Indian monkeys.

As a result of the cutbacks, researchers are sharing primates, an activity researchers once felt was unethical.

McPherson estimated the cost of breeding Rhesus, African green, Marmosets and owl monkeys, baboons and chimpanzees in captivity at $400 each. He said the cost of imported primates had risen sharply in recent years and may soon approach that of breeding them here.

Primates raised in captivity are better qualified for experiments, McPherson argued, because environmental conditions can be standardized and controlled in captivity.

He said the government uses 4,000 monkeys annually in testing drugs. Pharmaceutical firms use many more themselves, he said. Different species of monkeys are valuable in studies of hepatitis, malaria and cardio-vascular diseases, according to the researcher.

"We have a moral responsibility to share in the development of conservation programs and to cooperate with the wildlife conservation programs in the exporting countries," McPherson said.

"The marketplace can take care of allocation problems," he said, unless the situation becomes more critical. If that happens, he said, a board may have to be formed to allocate primate imports.

New use for old vessels

BATAVIA, Ill. (AP) — Decommissioned Navy vessels are finding an inglorious but useful home buried beneath the Illinois prairie, far from the bounding main.

Their hulls are being brought in pieces by rail and truck for use in high energy physics experiments at the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory.

Armor plates from the hull of the Wasp, the Baltimore, the Fall River, the Macon and other cruisers and aircraft carriers from World War II and the Korean War are buried deep in the laboratory's particle research facilities.

"The swords of the Navy's battle fleet have become the plowshares of nuclear research," says the newsletter for Fermilab, which contains the world's most powerful nuclear accelerator.

"The valuable metals once built into tools of war now serve the future of the world in peaceful basic research...."

Armor plates from the vessels usually measure 8 by 10 feet. They are 3½ to 6 inches thick and weigh four tons each. At Fermilab, they are used to filter out unwanted particles extracted from the atom.

The laboratory accelerates protons at nearly the speed of light to be used in physics experiments designed to explore the ultimate nature of matter.

Particles even smaller than protons, such as mesons and neutrinos, are produced when protons collide with a target.

But large numbers of other particles are produced that obscure the effects to be observed in the experiments. High density material is needed to filter out these unwanted particles.

The density is calculated to allow the desired particles to penetrate while the unwanted ones are filtered out, and that is where the old armor plate comes into use.

The laboratory acquires the steel, as well as lead used as ballast in decommissioned submarines, free from the Navy and pays $53 a ton to have it shipped.

Education is biggest Pomona enterprise

He speaks, of course, of programs and services provided by the Pomona Unified School District.

The district's size is reflected in enrollment, the number of people it employes and the amount of money it spends.

There are 23,309 persons enrolled in district classes: 11,231 in kindergarten through sixth grade, 8,443 in seventh through twelfth grade and 3,635 in adult education.

There are 2,911 people on the district's payroll, 911 teachers, 69 administrators, 157 adult school teachers, 250 substitute teachers, 1,024 classfied workers and 500 hourly workers.

This fiscal year, the district is administering revenues totaling $32,952,062.

Garrett C. Nichols, assistant superintendent of business services, includes in the breakdown:

—$25,741,233 general fund budget.
—$3,908,579 federal projects.
—$1,123,734 cafeteria account.
—$917,973 special building reserves.
—$1,012,809 regular building fund.
—$150,000 and $99,636 which came in this spring in federal and state grants for professional development and preschool programs respectively.

All revenues except those in the general fund budget are restricted and may be spent only on individually specified programs.

Nichols said that in round figures, 50 per cent of the general fund budget is state money and will be increased by about five per cent or $50.07 per pupil next year. This will amount to $1,219,505, according to current enrollment computations.

As enrollment declines, the amount of state aid could be lowered dramatically if the state withdraws education benefits for residents of Pacific State Hospital.

What additional income is received from the state next year will go into the general fund, Nichols said. It may be used to buy books, equipment and supplies and to pay increases in utility costs and teachers salaries.

If the county increases assessed property valuation, the portion of income schools receive from property tax also will be increased next year.

RESERVES

In this year's general fund budget, only $141,891 is in reserve fund and not budgeted for spending. Of this total, $116,891 is labeled appropriation for contingencies and may be spent if the school board thinks it is necessary. The remaining $25,000 is held in general reserve.

The special building reserve funds are being spent this year to replace the district's pre-Field Act schools.

Nichols said this fund would be closed out next year and the 10 cent per $100 assessed valuation permissive tax would not be levied.

This tax is allowable by the state for replacement of buildings that do not meet earthquake safety standards. All of Pomona district's pre-Field Act schools, built before 1933, will have been replaced by next fall.

The money in the regular building fund will be carried forward into next year's budget and most of it probably will be spent to build an addition at Garey High School which now is being planned.

SALARIES

Nichols said that of total revenues being administered this year, with exception of regular building fund money, slightly [illegible] per cent is being [illegible]mploye salaries.

Nichols said he did not think the federal projects monies would increase next year. In fact, he said, the district will "be fortunate if it holds its own."

There ar many variables involved including what projects the district is eligible to apply for, what applications are approved and to what extent approved applications are funded.

This year the district has its first $1.3 million Emergency School Aid Act (ESAA) grant which it shares with parochial schools in the community. It is applying for a $3.7 million ESAA grant for 1975-76.

Cafeteria funds, Nichols said, probably will maintain current levels of funding into 1975-76 ($1.1 million).

Income from federal and state lunch, breakfast and milk subsidies and food sales is meeting the cost of this year's program. The district's meals for needy tax income is not being needed presently, Nichols said.

The closing 1974-75 balance of $25,825 anticipated in the cafeteria account will be carried forward into next yera's budget.

PROJECTIONS

From these projections, it is apparent the district may start the 1975-76 school year with about $33 million in anticipated revenues.

This figure is based on the addition of the $1.2 million state money to the general fund budget. It means deleting the special building reserves, carrying forward the regular building monies and the profit from the cafeteria account and maintaining present funding for the cafeteria system and the federal projects.

Senate Bill 90, the legislation through which school districts now receive most of their state aid, uses a complex formula to determine income to school districts.

This formula is built on the baseline established in 1972-73, inflation, its Foundation Program, the assessed valuation of property in a district and the average daily attendance of the previous year.

For 1975-76 Nichols said it could possibly allow Pomona school district to raise its general purpose tax rate as much as 15 cents per $100 assessed valuation to maintain its per pupil revenue limit.

This, Nichols explained, would not effect the five per cent increase in state funding which is anticipated.

Breakdown

Each fulltime employe of the Pomona Unified School District currently is receiving, in addition to salary, $906 in fringe benefits, $227 above the $679 average in Los Angeles County.

This fringe benefit package extends to members of the school board who are considered district employes.

Each employe may choose how he or she wishes to have this money spent. They may purchase hospital, medical and dental-vision insurance coverage, life insurance, income protection insurance and make tax shelter investments.

Pomona School District administers the programs.

Cost to the district this year of this fringe benefit package is $1,483,451.

In addition, the district is paying $909,448 into the teachers' retirement fund, $325,047 into the retirement fund for classified employes and $257,635 into social security on classified employes.

The district is paying $47,119 into state unemployment insurance and $132,393 into workmen's compensation insurnce.

JULIUS AXELROD

Julius Axelrod, winner of a 1970 Nobel Prize for his independent basic research in the functions of the brain and nervous system, will deliver the 14th annual Fred J. Robbins Lectures at Pomona College, Claremont, Monday through Thursday.

A biochemist at the National Institute of Mental Health, Axelrod is the second American scientist to be awarded a Nobel Prize for work done at the Institute.

During his stay at Pomona College, Axelrod will present five lectures, only one of which will be specially prepared for the public.

When Axelrod received his Nobel Prize for resarch clarifying some of the most intimate functions of the brain and nervous system, he said the research would lead to a better understanding of human behavior, how drugs could be used to cure mental disorders, and correcting high blood pressure.

Pomona City Council

Controversial condominium up again

A developer proposing to build a 52-unit condominium complex on South Towne Avenue in Pomona is expected to appeal to the Pomona City Council Monday night, asking that a conditional use permit for the project be granted.

Request for the permit was denied by the city's Planning Commission last month after many residents of the area protested the proposed project.

The project is proposed for a 2½ acre site at 1804 S. Towne Ave. An environmental impact report for the project revealed it would have a negative impact on the surrounding areas.

Other agenda items for the 8 p.m. meeting include administration of oath of office to the newly re-elected Mayor Ray Lepire, and Councilmen Charles Bader and Georgia Grove.

An emergency ordinance fixing the salary of sworn uniform firemen will be considered.

Lepire will report on last week's trip to San Francisco, Seattle and Sacramento, where he and City Administrator Jerrold Gonce and Asst. City Administrator Joe Korpsak met with various federal and state agency officials.

A citizen's petition is expected to be presented to the council asking that installation of a four-way stop be considered for the intersection of Towne and Harrison Avenues.

Long haul passengers up; commuter flights and cargo down

Ontario International Airport

More passengers flew on long distance commercial flights but fewer boarded short haul commuter planes last month at Ontario International Airport than during the previous March.

Last month's commercial passengers included 45,375 departing and 46,568 arriving, for a total of 91,943. This compared with the previous March of 45,780 departing and 45,230 arriving.

The number of commuter passengers, however, dropped from 12,111 during March of 1974 to 8,499 last month.

"This is something we can't explain," said Robert Hamilton, airport manager. "We are puzzled over the drop in passengers."

The total number of passengers going through the airport last month reached 102,991, compared to 105,308 the previous March. Last month's figure included 2,093 on non scheduled flights and 456 on alternate operations.

The March total boosted the number of passengers so far this year to 282,965. This compares to 288,428 for the same period last year.

The commercial traffic, however, continued to show growth for the three month period by climbing from 242,991 passengers for the three months last year to 244,392 passengers the same three months this year.

More flight operations were counted last month than during the previous March — 11,537 to 10,018.

Officials also reported a large drop in air freight and air cargo during the comparison months. The airport handled 484,954 pounds of air freight and 8,712 pounds of air cargo last month. This compared to 523,054 pounds of air freight and 23,835 pounds of air express the previous March.

The airport is served by eight commercial airlines which has flights to 23 difierent cities.

Open Devore Interchange without fanfare

A four-level freeway interchange near the Ontario Motor Speedway was opened to traffic last week with little fanfare and no long speeches.

The $10 million structure will serve motorists using both the San Bernardino and Devore freeways.

Travel options now are somewhat limited since the interchange will initially serve motorists wanting to enter or depart the San Bernardino Freeway via Rochester or San Bernardino aves.

The upper levels won't be opened to vehicles until the Devore Freeway is extended south beyond the San Bernardino Freeway, said oficials.

An official ceremony marking the construction feat isn't planned until the Devore Freeway is opened to Foothill Boulevard near Fontana later this year or that section is completed to Devore above San Bernardino in 1977.

The only section of the Devore Freeway ready for traffic is a mile sector just north of the main interchange. This will connect to a 2.1 mile segment now being constructed north to Foothill Boulevard.

When fully utilized, the new interchange will be capable of handling 100,000 vehicles per day. It includes nine bridges and reaches a height of 80 feet.

The O. G. Sansone Co. of Riverside and Dan J. Peterson Co. of Arcadia, working under a joint venture, were awarded the contract during January 1972. Their low bid was $9.8 million.

Approved changes pushed the construction cost to the $10 million mark.

State officials said they will now push for funding to extend the Devore Freeway south of the San Bernardino Freeway. The first project would be for another bridge to span the Southern Pacific railroad tracks just south of the new interchange.

This would serve to link the interchange and two freeways with Slover and Milliken avenues.

Officials are also hopeful of starting construction early next year on another major interchange where the Devore Freeway will cross the existing Pomona Freeway in Riverside County. The interchange cost is estimated at $21.8 million.

Eventually, the Devore Freeway will extend Devore north of San Bernardino to San Diego, a distance of 102 miles.

Toning down record pirates

Recording artists and companies are losing as much as $200 million annually in sales and royalties, according to industry estimates, because of record "pirates" who bootleg duplicates to a thriving black market.

Until now, the original producers have found it difficult to prove that a stolen recording is not actually a "sound alike" version. Typically, the pirate will disguise his recording by superimposing material, such as an occasional guitar chord, so that if he is challenged — which seldom happens — he can claim that the entire recording was made by different performers.

The days of the record pirates may be literally numbered, however, thanks to a tone-coding system developed by a small New York firm, reports Electronics magazine.

Originally developed by the late Murray G. Crosby, the inventor of FM multiplex stereo, for keeping track of radio and television commercials as they are broadcast, the tones could serve as an invisible tag telling where a recording came from.

The system places a subaudible identifying code on the original master recording, which can be detected and decoded by a receiver-montior. The code, which can be applied to any recording medium, may be inserted several times in each disc or tape. The same signal will be reproduced on any recording made by a pirate, thereby identifying the material as that of the original producer.

The tone code may be useful in another respect, even with legitimate recordings. A proposed general revision of the copyright laws now before Congress includes an amendment that would require broadcasters to pay a royalty fee for every play of every record.

Audicom Corp. plans eventually to place monitoring stations in the top 200 broadcasting markets in the country. Decoded signals would be recorded daily and polled by telephone at the end of each broadcast day.

The data would be fed into a central processing unit for generation of proof of performance as well as for billing and collection reports, station logs, competitive media reports, music publisher royalty reports and advertiser audits.

A forgotten letter

It is only natural that after its years of agony over Southeast Asia that the United States should be going through a period of expiation, recrimination and other emotions stemming from the current state of affairs in Vietnam and Cambodia. As those far countries tumble, as their people flee the invaders and as their children find new homes, new families in America, Congress and the administration are seeking to provide humanitarian relief to that troubled corner of the world.

In so doing, however, Congress should remember a January incident which seems to have been forgotten in the rush of later developments. This was the letter from North Vietnam's foreign minister to Senator Edward Kennedy saying in effect that information on Americans missing in action wouldn't be forthcoming until the U.S. was out of Indochina.

Whatever action it takes to relieve the suffering in Southeast Asia, this nation should insist that North Vietnam abide by the Paris accords and account for our missing. In our rush to save the children and other victims of the Indochina war, the still unended anguish of hundreds of American families should not be forgotten.

Bad guys?

New Attorney General Edward Levi's proposal for additional hand gun controls is an interesting one because it seems to recognize that many Americans insist they have an absolute right to have a protective weapon in their home or business.

Not too many sportsmen, target shooters or collectors are walking the streets armed with pistols but there are plenty of hoodlums who are. Levi feels that banning hand-gun possession outside the home or business in high crime areas like most large cities might cut violence and crime in the streets.

The fallacy of most gun control proposals is they are aimed at the wrong target. Banning firearms penalizes the law abiding legitimate gun owner who uses them responsibly and obeys the law. The criminal is going to arm himself if he has to manufacture his weapon himself or steal it. The only gun control statute which might inhibit the thug is if he knew he faced an automatic 10 year jail term if he committed an armed felony, but mandatory prison terms and other punishment of criminals doesn't seem to be vogue these days.

Mr. Levi's concept will get a careful hearing in the Congress, but the lawmakers should remember who the bad guys really are.

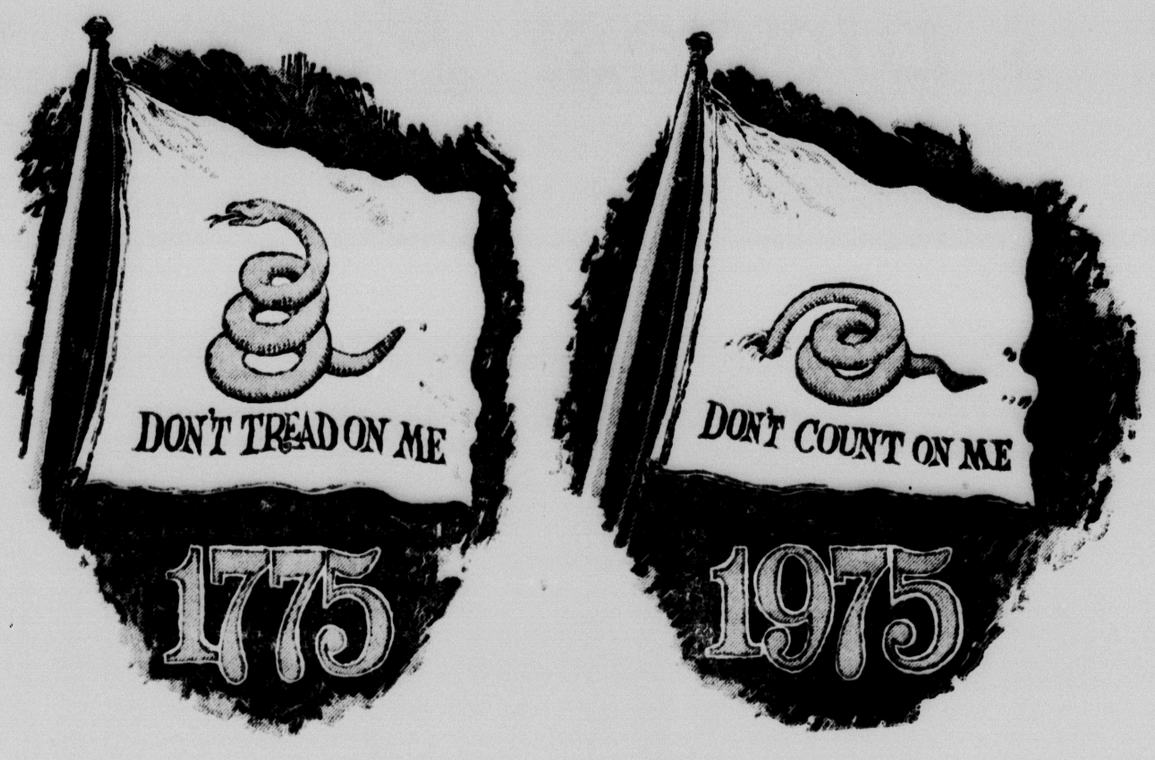
MACNELLY



JACK ANDERSON

Jackie's second marriage

WASHINGTON — The intimate, human story can now be told of the world's most publicized marriage — the life together of Aristotle and Jacqueline Onassis.

Our information comes from sources so close to the celebrated couple that the details cannot be doubted.

The world was startled when the multimillionaire shipping tycoon in 1968 married the widow of the martyred President John F. Kennedy.

Onassis was a swarthy, gnome-like man, two inches shorter and 24 years older than the beautiful Jackie. For the Kennedy legions, who had looked upon her as the keeper of Camelot, it was the end of a glorious era.

She had been afraid, her friends said, that she might tarnish Kennedy's memory if she became Mrs. Anybody Else. But she had succumbed, they suggested, to Ari's submerged irresistibility.

Our sources swear, on the contrary, it was Jackie who pursued Ari. As they recall the circumstances, Onassis got into a hot argument with his paramour, the tempestuous soprano Maria Callas, during a Caribbean cruise in the summer of 1968. She flew off in a fury to New York City.

About the same time, according to intimates, Jackie caught a commercial flight to the Virgin Islands and arranged an invitation to join Onassis on his yacht. A couple months later, he signed a premarital contract which, our sources say, awarded her $3 million in tax-free bonds. They were married on October 20, 1968, on his private Aegean island of Skorpios.

The old tycoon enjoyed the romantic conquest of the exquisite Jacqueline, who was regarded as one of the world's most desirable women, his friends say. But it was not at all a happy marriage.

They confirm The New York Times report that Onassis wanted a divorce. He had asked his confidant, John Meyer, to hire a private detective to seek evidence that could be used in a divorce proceeding. Lawyers had also been approached in both Greece and the United States to explore the legal obstacles to a divorce.

What concerned Onassis the most, apparently, were the financial consequences, for he had quietly determined, according to our sources, that the Greek Orthodox Church would allow him to dissolve the marriage on the simple grounds of incompatibility.

Apparently, Jackie received the message that the marriage was on the rocks. While she was vacationing with friends on Antigua in the British West Indies, aide Nancy Tuckerman called Onassis to give a routine report on Jackie's doings and to ask how long she should stay.

Sources with direct knowledge of the incident say he retorted: "Tell her to stay indefinitely."

Jackie's friends tell of an earlier quarrel over an incident in Rome involving movie star Elizabeth Taylor. Onassis and the actress were lunching together, along with other friends, when an intruder began annoying Ms. Taylor. Gallantly, Onassis splashed a glass of champagne in the intruder's face.

Jackie was embarrassed. "I am ashamed of you," she told Ari. She protested that "the children had seen news accounts" of the incident.

She frequently complained to her friends about Ari. "He is such a loner," she said. His tastes, she thought, were vulgar. She told of wearing a diamond he had picked out for her. She was mortified when a friend asked derisively: "What is THAT?" She also complained about being "stuck on Skorpios all summer long."

Worst of all, they couldn't stand each other's friends. Ari found Jackie's crowd too sophisticated, too jaded. He was even heard, not too discreetly, calling them "faggots."

One friend of Jackie's sister, Lee Radziwill, showed up at Skorpios and stayed for months. Ari complained, shaking his head hopelessly, that the uninvited guest had been caught cutting his wrist, dipping a quill in the blood and writing entries in his diary of his own blood. Onassis finally banned the man from his presence, our sources say.

Jackie, for her part, was bored by the oilmen Ari brought to Skorpios. One summer, a top executive of British Petroleum and his wife came to the island. Jackie virtually ignored them and entertained herself by running movies almost every night, according to sources who were there.

Another time, the Onassises were invited to dinner by a Mobil oil executive. Jackie refused to go and invented the excuse that her son John was sick.

As we reported in earlier columns, Onassis also began to resent his wife's extravagance. One of his associates, in an attempt to decribe Jackie's spending habits, told us: "You can believe anything, anything."

Ari kept cutting her budget until she complained bitterly to friends. She told them, for example, that she couldn't sue the photographer who took nude photographs of her with a long-distance lens because "Ari is so cheap."

One intimate summed up the Jackie-Ari relationship, after six and a half years of marriage, as "total incompatibility."

WASHINGTON WHIRL: We recently reported that balking bureaucrats at the Fish and Wildlife Service are obstructing the Endangered Species Act, which is supposed to stop the slaughter of vanishing animals. Our column brought a demand from four powerful senators — Warren Magnuson, D.-Wash., Robert Byrd, D.-W.Va., Alan Cranston, D.-Calif., and Philip Hart, D-Mich.—for a full report. "We wish to emphasize," they wrote, "that we view this matter as both serious and urgent" . . . In recent columns, we have exposed atrocious deficiencies in Veterans Administration hospitals. Now a Baton Rouge, La., veteran, Marvin Raborn, has evidence of malpractice. He will charge in a $3 million lawsuit that inadequate and irresponsible treatment in VA hospitals caused him severe injury. His story has been corroborated by doctors and lawyers . . . John Bartels, controversial chief of the Drug Enforcement Administration, was so furious over our recent report on the narcotics enforcement mess that he drafted a four-page response. This was sent to all his regional directors with stern orders that his comments must be "made known to all your employes" and should be used "as a regional response to any newspaper in the region that ran the Anderson column." If he were as zealous in pursuing dope pushers as he is in responding to press criticism, the DEA wouldn't be losing the drug war. There is nothing in his four-page response, incidentally, that requires the slightest retraction . . . Walter Reed Army Hospital recently called in the military police, believe it or not, to stop Army personnel from eating their own packed lunches at the hospital cafeteria. Only food purchased at the cafeteria, under the martial law that had been imposed inside the cafeteria, could be eaten on the premises. A spokesman said there was "a problem" but acknowledged that the use of military police "probably should not have happened."

"Is it tax deductible?"

Just in jest

I date back to the days when the Ingersoll dollar watch was a nifty time.piece. —Back to the less complicated years when one didn't feel he had to encircle his home with a laser beam fence to protect it from being burglarized — It was a golden era when such things as energy shortages were the least of our worries.

And why should we have had such worries? Didn't we start our cars with hand cranks? Fill them with gasoline from hand operated pumps? Weren't our phonographs hand wound? Didn't the dentist torture us with a foot operated tooth drill? Wasn't there a hand operated coffee grinder in every grocery store? And how about those newfangled hand powered vacuum cleaners?

In those days kids cut the kitchen stove wood with a bucksaw. If their mothers could round them up, they also turned the wheel that operated the plungers on the washing machine, a new invention that had replaced the washtub and scrub board. And, finishing with that, they could sometimes be coerced into vigorously manipulating the plunger on the butter churn. —It was a simpler age when males were males and you didn't have to check the plumbing to determine their sex.

What was more, in those days one was able to communicate reasonably well without having to supplement his conversation with body language, encounter therapy, or resort to an endless repitition of "you knows" to be sdure he would be undrstood. —So why am I telling you all this?

Well, I suppose it is just a matter of timing drilled into me by that Ingersoll dollar watch. With the world population now in excess of 4 billion people, maybe the time has come to point out that if we did it before we can do it again. —But we're not only going to have to communicate but also supplement the world's existing resources with some of that old fashioned manpower if we expect to remain much longer on this troubled globe.

Two former dope addicts pen reply to the one who sees 'crystal clear'

Dear Ann Landers: May I say a word to the person who said he enjoyed dope because it enabled him to see the world "crystal clear"?

Dear Sadly Mistaken: Maybe you think you are seeing the world "crystal clear," but I wish you could see yourself as others see you.

Your speech is slurred and your eyes have a peculiar look. You are moody and disagreeable. You've lost your sense of humor. You are furtive and uncommunicative. You lie. Your word means nothing. You insist you want more responsibility, but you can't even do what is required of you in school. You are a terrible time-waster. You have no goals. You've lost your initiative. You can't stop "sailing" long enough to see that you have become a dreamer instead of an achiever.

Perhaps life is easier when you coast along — no struggle, no ambition, no chance to fail because you never try anything.

I used to be where you are today but I got off that treadmill and back to living again. It only cost me $1. I sent for an Ann Landers booklet, "Straight Dope On Drugs." It was then that I began to see things "crystal clear."

It was the smartest dollar I ever spent in my life. Why don't you do the same? — Born Again In Michigan

Dear Born: Thank you for the testimonial. I'm glad my booklet helped. If anyone wants it, just send $1 to P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120 and enclose a self-addressed envelope with 20 cents postage.

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell "Crystal Clear" that two years ago I was where he is today. Reading his letter brought back some vivid memories.

I was into pot very heavy and I was convinced it was sharpening my senses, making me more aware of the beauty of art, nature, music, sex, enhancing my hearing and my taste buds. Baloney, horse manure, and balderdash, Buster.

Dope only removes you FROM reality. It doesn't improve one damned thing. The paintings are the same, the music is no better, the pizza is the identical stuff that was put in front of you before you lit up, and sex — well, if you can hack it it's O.K., but it actually unlit my fire.

The one thing pot did was to make me paranoid. Cops, little old ladies in tennis shoes, everybody scared me to death. I was sure the whole world was out to get me. The unauthentic world of dope is a psychosis.

My friends in the dope world were immature, irresponsible, fly-by-nights and also moochers. After some bitter hassles, I got off by myself and woke up to the fact that I had been letting the dope do my thinking. My decisions were lousy because I was togged up and goofy.

I'm off the stuff now and facing my problems head-on, not waltzing around in a cloud of smoke. I feel alive instead of spaced-out and half dead. I don't buy everything the straight world has to offer — not by a long shot — but at least I know I'm the master of my ship. — Former Fool

Dear Former: Thanks for the bulletin. Full steam ahead.

Don't flunk your chemistry test. Love is more than one set of glands calling to another. If you have trouble making a distinction you need Ann's booklet, "Love or Sex and How To Tell the Difference." Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request and 50 cents in coin to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We're going to spay Aunt Martha after she has her first litter of kittens. They're underway now. The doctor said she's only going to have one or two. We've decided to keep the kittens, or kittens, too, and want to raise them to be the best possible cats. How old do the kittens have to be before we can safely begin to handle them? We'll have to resist the temptation at first, I'm sure. — D. B.

DEAR D. B.: Don't be too sure. In fact, if you can persuade Aunt Martha to go along with it, you can start handling kittens carefully from Day One, or at least Day Two. The human contact, plus the stress that even careful handling involves, is beneficial, long term, to these newborn kittens. They'll become more adptable and usually smarter in the long run than the same kittens would if not handled during this very early period. Such kittens mature with an increased capability to handle normal or abnormal stresses and strains.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Birds have been using my heated birthbath all winter whenever there's water in it. The trouble is, this St. Bernard comes over from next door and drinks out of it all the time. One good drink and there's no water in it for the birds. Is there some way I can rig up a wire screen over the top to keep the dog out of it? She has water at home, too, I've checked. — G. M.

DEAR G. M.: Any kind of metal mesh or grillwork around the water supply would be dangerous for the birds, since in very cold weather their tongues might actually freeze against the metal. A grillwork of wood, such as doweling, wouldn't be dangerous but obviously it would interfere with the birds' getting at the water easily. If there's any way you could elevate the water bath sufficiently (admittedly, this might take some doing to keep it away from this particular dog), that could solve the problem.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I've set up a big breeding tank for my pair of pike top minnows. I put a dash of salt in the water, plenty of plants, set temperature for 80 degrees F. The fish looked healthy; there was no reason I can see they shouldn't breed. Then yesterday I discovered one. The male is missing. There's no way our cat, Pancho, could get into that tank, I don't think, because it's got a cover on it. Why didn't they breed, and how could the male fish have escaped? —G.T.

DEAR G.T.: A. You don't know for sure they didn't breed. The gestation period is 30 to 50 days for the pike top minnow, Belonesox belizanus. Be sure there are plenty of thicks cushions of riccia. This heavy plant cover is needed to protect the young — from the mother that is. B. Speaking of hungry females, they're not only cannibalistic toward their young, but females have been known to eat mates almost as big as they were. Under the described conditions, it is pointless to point to Pancho as the predator. It's completely possible the hapless male satisfied his mate — completely.

ERMA BOMBECK

Let's face it, I'm just unstable!

My mother-in-law and I have a great relationship. She calls me Edna and I call her on her birthday, Mother's Day and Christmas.

At the wedding when she insisted they put a funeral flag on the fender of her car and drove with her lights on, I sensed somehow I was not what she would have chosen for her son.

But God love her, she has a sense of humor and somehow we've all survived. She has accepted me for what I am. A mistake. And I have learned to live with her through the miracle of sedation.

One of her idiosyncrasies, however, I will never adjust to. I call it her Last Breath Performance.

Check this. I am driving the car and she is sitting beside me. Out of the clear blue sky, I hear her suck in her breath, moan slightly and slump, steadying her head with her hand. I wait, but she doesn't exhale.

The first time this happened, I figured (a) she was leaving the car on a permanent basis; (b) I had closed the electric windows on a gas station attendant and was towing him by his fingers; or (c) we were being followed by a tornado funnel.

Instinctively, I jammed on the brakes of the car, nearly hurling her through the windshield, turned around, grabbed her shoulders, and shouted hysterically, "What's the matter?"

"Darn it," she said. "I just remembered I forgot to lock my back door."

During subsequent drives, I was to learn that she gasped and graoned at girls in shorts, roses in full bloom, a half-stick of gum discovered in her raincoat, and the realization that tomorrow was her sister-in-law's birthday.

She didn't limit her Last Breath Performance to the car. When she watched television or read the newspaper, she would inhale noisily, freeze, put her hand over her mouth and say, "Where will a pleasant boy like Dick Cavett find work?"

I pride myself in being able to live in peace with my mother-in-law, and she puts up with me. The other day we were driving together when she sucked in her breath, clutched her purse and mumbled, "Oh, my."

Figuring she had just remembered a dental appointment, I kept moving and promptly smacked into a truck pulling out from the alley.

She shook her head and made a clicking noise with her tongue. "I tried to warn you, Edna, but you wouldn't listen."

"Face it, Mother," I said. "I'm unstable."

IS U.S. FADING?

Which allies will America protect?

By NEA-London Economist News Service

It is not only in Southeast Asia that the Americans now have to examine the effects of what is happening in Vietnam. There are two over-easy things to say about the public collapse of their 20-year-old policy there, and neither of them is quite true.

The first is to say that the Indochina rout will now make every ally of the United States doubt whether it can believe in promises of American support. That is a considerable oversimplification, because Indochina was never as important to American interests as some other parts of the world are. The Vietnamese, the Cambodians and the Laotians have perched for these 20 years on an outer branch of the American tree.

The other is to say, as Harold Wilson and Billy Brandt have said, that the Indochina shambles should have no effect on America's older allies at all. That is an oversimplification, too, because the issue is not merely how close a connection the Americans feel they have with these other countries when things are calm, but how far they will be ready or willing to hold on to that connection when things are harder. The past month's events make the question of American credibility a genuine one; and it is important not to exaggerate the answer, either way.

The long list of countries around the world that depend, in one degree or another, on the American connection can be ranked in a rough order of priority. The ranking depends on how important each country is to American interests, and particularly American economic interests; on whether it has the sort of political system Americans want to protect; and on whether it possesses an effective lobby of supporters inside the United States itself.

By all those tests it is comforting — and true — for Western Europe and probably Japan as well to tell themselves that they stand high on the American list. Their economies are important to America, to the extent that any foreign economy matters to a country that puts only a tenth of its gross national product into foreign trade; they are democracies; and there are plenty of Americans ready to say that, if either Western Europe or Japan fell into some other power's sphere of influence, the impact on American interests elsewhere would be very large.

The case of Israel is not so clear-cut. It is a democracy, and it has some powerful supporters in the United States, but by the narrow test of American economic self-interest in a world dominated by the need for Arab oil Israel is the sort of client some Americans wish they no longer had. And yet even Israel can correctly reckon that it lies closer to the center of American policy than the countries of Indochina do. The same is probably true of most of Latin America, of Australia and New Zealand, and maybe even of countries with potentially important economies, such as Indonesia and Iran. Vietnam, economically insignificant and politically never more than a possible democracy, was always at the farthest stretch of the American arm.

Only about one American in three, according to a recent poll, would now be prepared to have American troops fight even for the defense of Western Europe. The decline in public support for the commitment to Europe comes partly, to be sure, from a feeling that Europe is now rich enough to spend more on its own defense (although in fact no feasible increase in Western Europe's defense spending could make it militarily self-sufficient). But it also comes partly from the damage the Vietnam war has done to American self-confidence.

It is therefore not unreasonable for America's allies to wonder whether a retraction under pressure from the outlying Indochina part of American policy might not be followed, if the pressure is great enough, by a retraction from other and apparently closer parts.

The majority of Americans now seem to be in a mood to ask what they stand to gain by helping to defend any particular country, and then to set that gain against the cost of providing the help. If the cost increases, as measured either by peacetime American defense budgets or possible American wartime casualties or just political controversy at home, the value of the commitment — the value, that is, to Americans — is re-examined.

This is not the American alliance as it once seemed. In the last resort, of course, no nation-state gives an open check, guaranteeing its support in any circumstances whatsoever, to any other nation-state. But when the American alliance first took shape, in 1947 and 1948, the United States and the countries it offered to support seemed to be tied together closely enough for the Americans to regard a threat to one of their friends as the equivalent of a threat to themselves. That was the basis of the central phrase in the North Atlantic Treaty.

It is this assumed knitting together of interests that no longer seems so certain. The Americans are readier to use their own judgment, rather than that of any ally, in deciding how far they should go on its behalf.

This could be important to the European allies, because the main problem that Western Europe faces has changed over the past few years. The danger to the democracies of Europe no longer comes mainly from the risk of a direct Soviet invasion, although that risk could become a serious one again if the armies in Western Europe grow much weaker.

It comes from the possibility that the Communist parties in a number of European countries may be able to climb to power, and then be undislodgeable from it, by breaking the rules of the democratic system. This has happened in Portugal, where last year's hopes of democracy have vanished because the Communists and their military allies have arranged things so that they will remain the country's effective government no matter who is elected to a largely powerless parliament later this year.

The same sort of thing could happen in Spain in a year or two. It is not inconceivable in Greece; and the doubts about what the Communist parties of France and Italy eventually hope to achieve have by no means been fully answered.

This is a problem that nobody knows how today's America will respond to. Ten years ago, if the Americans had seen the Communist party in a West European country twist the democratic process as the Portuguese Communists and their allies are now twisting it, they would almost certainly have regarded it as a challenge to the alliance they led. The United States gave its acquiescence, for too long, to a right-wing dictatorship in Portugal; but a left-wing one, superimposed on the first growth of democracy, would have seemed a different business.

The change between America then and America now is that most Americans probably no longer regard such matters as lying within the scope of their European responsibilities. The pulling back of burned American fingers is not something that affects only Southeast Asia. Although their links to America are undeniably closer, it affects the countries of Western Europe too.

WORLD STARVATION

Empty stomach aids appreciating hunger

STANFORD — (BW) — An "empty stomach might be more important than a full head in understanding world hunger," Prof. Robert McAfee Brown of Stanford told a Food Day rally on White Plaza at Stanford University.

"The importance of fasting is chiefly what it does for us, rather than for someone else," he said. The "mild unpleasantness" of going one day without food might "raise our consciousness, ever so little, about the plight" of a world where 15,000 persons starve to death daily.

Militarism, racism and imperialism all contribute to world hunger, he noted.

"For example, we will feed refugees in Cambodia and Vietnam, and that is good. But in large measure we ourselves created those refugees. We napalmed their villages, we defoliated their crops, we rendered their rice fields unploughable.

"We have food stamps for blacks in American ghettos who don't have enough money to pay regular prices. It is good that they get food, but we have created conditions that make it impossible for them to have an adequate earning capacity.

"We have segregated their housing, denied them first-rate schooling and thereby closed off all kinds of jobs to them.

"There are thousands of people in Chile who are starving because inflation rates have soared out of sight, and the Chilean government will do nothing about it. And that government, the military junta, seized power and remains in power with American connivance and help.

"Hence our country contributes to starvation on the outskirts of Valparaiso and Santiago.

"The basic problem is not hunger, but injustice. And this injustice gets built into the very structures of a society that is supportive of me, but destructive of others.

"The problem is not that people are hungry; the problem is that we have so organized life on this planet that it is inevitable that people will continue to be hungry when they needn't be, and that the many continue to be dependent in the hand outs from the few."

A founder of clergy & laity concerned (about Vietnam) Brown visited Cambodia last month. A member of his family recently returned from Chile.

An estimated 2,000 Stanford students are participating in a one-day fast to mark Food Day.

strongmen are very much in evidence, however.

You have to have a license to own a typewriter, because the written word could sow dangerous seeds of counter-revolution. An Iraqi cannot resign his job without government consent, which is hard to get in a country that has suffered a serious brain drain.

cessful. Diplomatic informants say only one topflight scientist has returned from the United States to take advantage of the high salaries, housing benefits and research subsidies offered by government recruiters.

Citizens with technical qualifications required by the state have to pay "passport deposits" ranging up to $10,000 to make sure they return from vacations abroad. Those with foreign assets are sent to bring them back, often with a relative kept hostage at home.

"It's not against the law to be rich," confided one inheritor of a modest estate, "but it's much safer to be poor."

Vice President Saddam Hussein, who is technically deputy chairman of the Baath party's Revolutionary Command Council, is openly acknowledged as the real strongman of Iraq. His picture always hangs beside that of President Ahmed Hassan al-Bakr in shops, restaurants, hotel lobbies and other public buildings.

There are rumors of periodic purges in the armed forces and party, whispers of executions of Communists and members of the outlawed Masonic Order, power plays between the Shia Moslem majority and the ruling Sunni minority.

"There have been a lot of bad publicity and lies about Iraq," said Information Minister Tareq Aziz. "It is time the world realized that we are an independent country where anyone can live in freedom, be he Kurd, Arab, Christian or Moslem."

Nasel Anadi, a member of the Baath party national leadership, explained that Iraqis are not Communists. "We have not copied Moscow or anyone else, although we consider the East bloc our friends and allies.

"Iraq is a rich country and we have a different application of socialism. We do not aim to abolish religion for example. We are not Marxists."

The professionals who administer Iraq's planning and economy ministries admit that they have to put up with a lot of "tiresome propaganda." But they are clearly excited by the challenge of accelerated development.

"Our only problem is to foresee long enough in advance what we need in a country that needs everything," said Sabah Kachachi, a University of Illinois graduate who heads industrial planning.

"We are already providing free education and medical services. Now the priorities are agriculture and industry. We are not interested in letting our money lie around in foreign banks, having Mercedes cars or islands in North Carolina.

"We are spending it here in Iraq, for the Iraqi people, as quickly as possible. You might consider our development plans too ambitious. Maybe they are, but we're going to give it a damn good try."

(Please turn to Page 21, Col. 8)

He cited the Baath party's eagerness to bring progress to rural areas, where 40 per cent of the population is still without electricity or potable water.

"We got foreign consultants, we made studies, and we decided it would take at least 15 years to bring electricity to half of those people," he said. "The party leadership came right back and told us to do it in three years. They said we could have all the money we wanted, but they wanted no arguments about the time limit."

Steel mills, petrochemical plants, fertilizer factories and other industrial projects are all geared for natural gas consumption. Iraq has 250 billion cubic feet of gas, and 35 per cent of it is presently burned off as waste.

In agriculture, Kachachi cited a historical precedent that the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers used to feed 40 million people in Biblical times.

"It is ridiculous to suggest that we cannot feed 10 million now. Iraq is only cultivating one-third of its arable land. We should be exporting wheat, not importing it from Kansas. But we're modernizing our techniques and one day we will outproduce California five times over."

Kchachi acknowledges there are problems.

"Our bureaucracy is a nightmare ... too much red tape, too much opposition to new ideas.

"We have a housing shortage. Some of our people are lazy ... too many big lunches, too many siestas. We lack a middle cadre of skilled blue-collar workers, foremen, supervisors. I am sick of Arabs being poets and philosophers. I respect one technician more than 100 poets."

Per capita income has risen from $300 to $1,020 in three years. The shops are filled with expensive consumer goods like television sets and washing machines. The streets are a riot of American, European and Soviet automobiles— most of them admittedly old because of a 300 per cent tax on new cars.

Red double-decker buses are a relic of the old British mandate days. They clatter past the glazed-tile domes of Baghdad's beautiful mosques, through slums endemic to every Arab capital and attractive residential areas of high-rise apartments and villas on the banks of the Tigris.

"Now that we have raised the standard of living, the people are starting to demand better housing," said Economy Undersecretary Mahdi Ubaydi. "There is free housing for rural families and plenty of credit for those who want to build in the city."

Rents have doubled in the last year, but government subsidies have prevented inflation in basic staples like bread, rice and kerosene.

There are movie theaters with spaghetti Westerns, nightclubs with tired Egyptian belly dancers, and restaurants with spicy curries. Iraqis who don't belong to the Baath party says there is little intimidation by ideologues in every day life.

When they find themselves dining with a Baathist functionary at Farouk's restaurant, they try not to pay attention to the bodyguards who sit around clutching their armpits.

Detention camp may be closed

SAN DIEGO (AP)—Officials fear state health and safety inspectors might close the county's juvenile detention center at Campo and are preparing an emergency plan to move the youths.

The board of supervisors Tuesday authorized preparation of a plan to find a temporary home for the delinquents housed at Rancho del Campo, which served as an Army barracks before World War II.

"Campo is substandard and could be closed at any time by state officials if they inspect those facilities," said Supervisor Jack Walsh.

If the county doesn't find alternative facilities, Walsh said, the youths probably would be moved into a state facility for hardcore offenders at Norwalk.

Pitzer College setting for annual event

The busy auxiliary members are completing plans for a dinner dance to be held Saturday evening in the Founders Room of Pitzer College.

The group has chosen a rose theme for the event scheduled from 8:30 p.m. until 1 a.m. Music will be provided by the Bob Mahoney Quartet.

Chairman for the spring event is Mrs. Jack Goodfellow. Assisting chairmen are Mmes. Richard Greer, decorations; George Calloway, reservations; Jack Pitzer, invitations; Douglas Betts, food; and Don Zugates, public relations.

Children's Home Society of California was established in 1891, and today it is recognized as one of the nation's leading child welfare agencies.

The Society offers counseling to pregnant women and to troubled parents, married or unmarried, who face a crisis concerning their own future and that of a child. When children need temporary care until they can be in their own homes, CHS provides licensed foster homes where children live as temporary family members.

When children need permanent homes, with the love and security of belonging, CHS will unite them with carefully selected adoptive parents.

Children's Home Society is supported by service fees, auxiliary fund-raising events, United Fund allocations, memberships, memorials, bequests, trust funds, foundation grants and gifts from individuals.

Claremont Auxiliary, formed in 1956 and currently having 41 active members and 60 associate members, has two major fund-raising events annually.

China pieces located in America by group

One of the frustrating moments in a woman's life is that time when she attempts to fill in missing pieces of her china service only to find it is no longer manufactured and, in many cases, is no longer available locally.

Thousands of women had this experience in 1970 when, after 100 years of manufacturing fine china, Syracuse China Company went out of business.

China Chasers was formed in early 1973 to aid women in filling in their Syracuse China patterns and, to date, the company has helped hundreds of women.

Until now, the company has "chased" only Syracuse, but in response to requests from owners of discontinued Lenox and Castleton patterns, they will find items formerly manufactured by these firms.

Persons interested in locating pieces of Syracuse, Lenox or Castleton patterns may write to China Chasers, Inc., P. O. Box 214, Dunwoody, Ga., 30338, including a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a prompt reply.

Palmer increases her lead at Palm Springs

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Tiny Sandra Palmer, scoring her third straight two-under-par 70, moved out to a three-stroke lead after Saturday's third round of the $200,000 Dinah Shore Winners Circle Women's Golf Tournament.

• KABC (7), 1:30 p.m.

Kathy McMullen wheeled off a 66, six-under-par and a course record on the 6,347-yard Mission Hills course, to move into second and Canada's Jocelyne Bourassa fell to third after faltering with a 73.

The 5-foot-1 Miss Palmer, scoring birdies when she had to, was briefly tied for the lead by Miss Bourassa.

But the dark-haired lass from Montreal, who at one point was five under par for the tournament, bogeyed four of the last nine holes including the last three in a row.

The almost unknown Miss McMullen, still seeking her first tour victory after five years as a pro, had a four-over-par 76 on the second round, but stormed back with what she termed "my best round ever."

Debbie Austin and Jane Blalock were tied for fourth place, each with one-under-par rounds, and Carol Mann, Sue Roberts and Bonnie Bryant, the only left-hander on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, were all tied at even par 216.

Joining Miss McMullen in setting the course mark 66 was Miss Roberts, who had a hole-in-one on the par 3, 155-yard fifth hole, that moved her from six over par to even par after the day. The hole-in-one earned her $5,000.

Miss Palmer, of Dallas, missed a chance for a birdie on the first hole when her iron shot from the fairway plopped eight feet in front of the cup and she was unable to make the putt, missing by only a couple of inches to the side.

Both Miss Palmer and Miss Bourassa went into sand traps on the second hole.

But Miss Bourassa, challenging for the lead at the time, chipped out from 50 feet away and bounced to within two feet of the cup and then holed a birdie putt.

Miss Palmer's second shot on the same par-five, 475-yard hole went into a bunker 60 yards from the pin. She whipped out an iron shot that came to within 10 feet of the pin, missed a birdie try and then got her par.

The incredibly consistent Texan needed only a three-foot putt for a birdie on the par 4, 370-yard seventh hole when her second shot bounced straight for the pin. She made her toughest shot of the day on the ninth to tie Miss Bourassa in their duel after the Canadian had birdied the hole playing in the threesome right in front of the leader.

Miss Palmer's effort on the ninth came when she made a tricky 15-foot downhill putt for her birdie four.

Miss McMullen wheeled off six birdies, four of them on the front nine, scoring on putts of about 10 feet and a 15-footer on No. 9.

She birdied two more on the back nine, including a downhill slope to beat par on the 18th green.

Asked after her stunning round if she thought she had a chance for the $32,000 first prize in this event, the sturdy Miss McMullen said, "I sure do. I'll take one more 66 just like this. Today I did as well as I did bad yesterday."

While only nine strokes separated the entire field after Thursday's first round of the 72-hole event, only the five leaders managed to better par overall and only the first eight were at even par or better.

Wynn, Sutton keep streaks going, 3-2

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jimmy Wynn ran his hitting streak to 12 straight games with two run-scoring singles to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 3-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday night.

Don Sutton got the victory for Los Angeles, his 12th straight regular season win. Sutton, 3-0 this season, hasn't lost since last Aug. 16, stringing together 15 consecutive victories including three wins in post-season play last fall.

The Los Angeles right-hander, who has allowed only two earned runs in 32 innings this season for an 0.56 earned run average, gave up an unearned run in the second inning when Marc Hill singled home Chris Speier, who had singled and taken second on a passed ball.

But the Dodgers got even in the third when Wynn singled home Manny Mota, who had walked.

Los Angeles, which has won six of its last seven starts, went in front with two runs in the fifth. Rick Auerbach started the rally with a double, later scoring the go-ahead run on Wynn's base hit. Steve Garvey singled home Lopes with the Dodgers' third run.

Sutton left for a pinch-hitter in the seventh. He was replaced by Mike Marshall, who apparently pulled a muscle on his left side and left the game. Charlie Hough replaced Marshall and surrendered a home run to Bobby Murcer, his first as a National Leaguer.

Los Angeles left fielder Bill Buckner, injured in the third inning of Friday night's game, had his sprained left ankle placed in a cast Saturday and will be lost to the Dodgers for possibly as long as two weeks.

Tom Paciorek, who replaced Buckner only to be injured himself when he crashed into the fence in front of the leftfield seats, suffered a painful hip pointer and was not in uniform for Saturday night's game. He will likely be able to play in Sunday's series finale.

McGee takes a soggy lead at Pensacola

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Jerry McGee, a nine-year veteran still looking for his first tour victory, shot a five-under-par 66 in the rain-drenched $125,000 Pensacola Open golf tournament Saturday and took the lead after three rounds with a 54-hole total of 201, 12-under-par.

The 31-year-old McGee, whose best finish ever was a third in the Greater Greensboro Open two weeks ago, claimed a one-shot edge over quiet Wally Armstrong, an obscure 29-year-old who also had a 66 for a 202 total.

McGee, winner of $40,000 so far this year, said, "I've got only one thought—to win the golf tournament. I've been close but I've never won. I want to win."

McGee had an erratic front side, scoring two birdies, two bogeys and an eagle three with a 12-foot putt on the 542 yard sixth hole.

He moved into the lead following a 34-minute rain delay that left water all over the flat, 6,679-yard, par-71 Pensacola Country Club course.

McGee was on the 13th green facing an 18-foot birdie putt when play was suspended.

"I just tried to visualize it going in and, lo and behold, when I hit after the delay, it did go in," he said.

He closed with two pars after lipping the cup with a 20 foot birdie try on the 15th and adding a birdie from 10 feet at 16.

Armstrong, who also has never won, recorded six birdies in his round, three on each side, and took his only bogey of the day on the par-three seventh.

Meanwhile, the rainstorm seemed to destroy the game of second-round leader Don Iverson, who faded badly with a 73 that dropped him five shots off the pace at 206.

Following the storm, Iverson, who shared the lead at the time, took a double-bogey six on the 13th and then a bogey on 14, fading out of the picture.

Angels scramble back to win, 6-5

CHICAGO (AP) — Ellie Rodriguez' double triggered a three-run rally in the seventh inning, and the California Angels added another run in the eighth with the help of an error and a passed ball to whip the Chicago White Sox 6-5 Saturday.

Winner Bill Singer, 1-1, needed relief from Mickey Scott after giving up his seventh and eighth hits of the game in the eighth inning. The White Sox then proceeded to tee off on the Angels reliever for their final three runs in a rally capped by Deron Johnson's RBI single.

Chicago's ace Wilbur Wood lost his fourth straight game of the baseball season.

With one out in the seventh and the score tied 2-2, Rodriguez doubled to right for California. Jerry Remy then singled, and when right fielder Bill Sharp fumbled the ball for an error, Rodrieguez scored.

Remy stole second and went to third on Orlando Ramirez' bunt single. Ramirez stole second, and both runners scored when Jorge Orta booted Morris Nettles' grounder for an error.

Leroy Stanton, on base in the California eighth via a force-out bouncer, stole second and continued to third on a bad throw by Chicago catcher Brian Downing. He then scored the eventual winning run on a passed ball by Downing.

The Angels scored two runs in the first inning on a triple by Mickey Rivers, a walk, an infield out and a single by Dave Chalk.

Chicago scored one in the first on an error, a single by Orta and a sacrifice fly by Bill Melton and then tied it in the fourth on singles by Ken Henderson and Carlos May and an infield out.

The five Angel stolen bases was a club record. The last time an Angel club stole four bases was last Oct. 1 in a 2-0 victory over the Oakland A's. The other stolen bases were by Dave Chalk and Nettles.

Mickey Rivers had three hits—a single, double and triple—and raised his batting average to .365.

Perhaps the biggest surprise of the season, however, is Remy, the rookie who opened the season at second base after beating out Denny Doyle for the job. Remy had a base hit and has now hit safely in all but one of the Angels' nine games. He has 11 hits in 35 at bats.

Singer, who was shaky in the first two innings of his first outing, gave up a run to the Sox in the first inning Saturday but didn't have much trouble after that. He gave up only one earned run despite walking four and permitting eight hits.

MSAC Relays also features 'Special' events

Along with some of the world's finest track and field athletes converging on Mt. San Antonio College Stadium Saturday will be the best of our Pomona and East San Gabriel Valley "Special Olympians".

For the first time in the 17-year history of the Relays, the 1975 Relays Committee will be extending invitations to several schools who have already been involved in the "California Special Olympic Program" — part of the John Kennedy Foundation. Special Olympics Chairman Tom Fitzsimmons is coordinating that portion of the total three-day program which will be providing athletic competition to those young boys and girls of special schools throughout Pomona Valley, East San Gabriel Valley, Long Beach and Pacific State Hospital.

Representing the Pomona Valley will be David Hand, Kevin Stewart, Bobby McClous, Elizabeth Castillo, Yolanda Macias, Donna Woody, Olivia Cates, ages 12 and 13, competing in the 50 yard dash; Joe Bates, Matt Dominguez, Robin Reed, Linda Wood, Teresa Garcia and Suzanne Follette, ages 14-17, competing in the 440 yard run.

From the East San Gabriel Valley area (Sunset School) will be Kevin Wales, Cesar Garcia, Jerry Ricketts, Cheryl Callahan, Sara Koch, Barbara Donaldson, ages 12-13, in the 50 yard dash. John McDonald, Danny Siegfried, Gene Cruz, ages 14-15; David Hernandez, Ricky Villegaant, Danny Lewis, Randi Bayless, Patricia Patterson, Cheryl Buchanon, ages 16-17, competing in the 440 yard run.

Has Ellsworth's empire ended?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The case of Rex Ellsworth's starving horses has come to a close, but the questions remain.

Ellsworth's printed explanations aside, animal cruelty officials still wonder how one of America's most renowned throughbred breeders could have allowed 130 mares to go for months without food, wasting away, weakening. Ten of the horses died.

Is it, as some have declared, the "sad end of an empire" for the 67-year-old no-nonsense cowboy, the man who challenged the plush Eastern stables, the man whose wonder horse Swaps won the 1955 Kentucky Derby and more than $850,000 in prize money?

One man who doesn't think so is William Scott, the San Bernardino County assistant district attorney who prosecuted Ellsworth on animal mistreatment charges.

"Rex Ellsworth has been up, and he's been down, in the past," says Scott. "I wouldn't be surprised to see him up there again."

Perhaps. But signs are that a combination of bad luck and his strange behavior have saddled Ellsworth with a difficult future.

His ranch of more than 300 acres in Chino is up for sale. Once the pride of California's thoroughbred industry, it has described as "pretty run down" by the Los Angeles real estate broker that is marketing it. No price was disclosed.

Through a complicated series of financing arrangements, most of the ranch slipped from Ellsworth's control several years ago. A financing company, National Marine Terminal Inc., owns all but 20 acres on which the barns and ranch houses are located. And the broker says he feels that if the price were right, Ellsworth might sell even that and leave the area altogether.

The horses themselves, well on the road back to health after being impounded and cared for by the Los Angeles Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, are being transfered to another Ellsworth ranch near Benson, Ariz.

Wiencek's blast wins for Troy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — USC leftfielder Gary Wiencek, a product of Claremont High and Citrus College, blasted a home run in the first game and helped win the second with three hits Saturday as the Trojans swept a day-night baseball doubleheader from UCLA by identical 6-4 scores.

Wiencek unloaded with two men aboard in the first contest and collected a double and two singles in four trips and scored twice in the nightcap.

Wiencek prepped at Claremont High and played two years at Citrus College in Azusa before accepting a two-year baseball scholarship at USC.

Vallone hurls MSAC past Cerritos, 5-2

By MIKE RAWLINSON
P-B Staff Writer

The South Coast Conference is going to have a baseball race instead of a runaway, thanks to Mt. San Antonio College which won the game it had to Saturday afternoon at MSAC.

Coach Art Mazmanian's Mounties halted South Coast leading Cerritos, 5-2, behind lefthander Jim Vallone's four-hit, five strike out pitching and Dan Gans' two-run triple in the fifth inning.

The victory ended a three season, eight-game losing streak for the Mounties against the big boppers from Norwalk who have won the South Coast title three years in a row and are the defending state JC champions.

MSAC is 1-2 against the Falcons this season with one more meeting coming up next Saturday at MSAC. The Mounties are 1½ games off the pace entering this week. They host Orange Coast Monday, San Diego Mesa Tuesday and visit Fullerton Thursday before facing Cerritos again.

Cerritos was anything but a big bopper Saturday. Vallone (4-2) saw to that. The classy lefty gave up runs in the first and ninth and threw blanks at the Falcons in the middle innings.

He walked six but got out of trouble as easily as he got into it as his ERA slid below 1.75.

MSAC didn't knock the ball all over the park either but Mazmanian's crew lumped their three safeties at the right time—two in the first for two runs and one one in the fith for three tallies.

The Mounties countered with two in the bottom half of the frame as Frank Marini was hit by loser Charlie Kretschmar's pitch and came around on singles by Gary Adair and Binky Benton.

Adair scored later as Ron Roenicke bounced into a double play.

In the fourth, Kretschmar issued walks to Parkinson and catcher Tracy Cowger and designated hitter Dan Gans drilled a triple to drive both runners home. Gans scored on Jerry Hatley's sacrifice bunt.

In the ninth Vallone erased the first two batters on a strike out and a ground out and then walked Bob McKelvey and Tim Welsch. Catcher Dave Crowder doubled down the leftfield line to score McKelvey and Welsch went to third. Vallone ended the game by getting Art Harold to ground out second baseman Marty Shepherd.

Decathletes lead APC track win

Azusa Pacific College (68) downed UC Riverside (39), University of Redlands (35½) and Cal State Bakersfield (32½) Saturday afternoon in a quadrangular track meet at Redlands.

The Cougars were paced by a pair of decathletes, Bruce Kupersmith and Roger Johnson. Kupersmith, who set the school record in the decathlon earlier this year, won the 440 intermediate hurdles and ran on the winning 440 and mile relay teams.

Johnson captured the high jump and javelin, took third in the triple jump and pole vault and placed fourth in the long jump.

Cal Poly settles for split vs. UCR

By CRAIG TRAVIS
P-B Correspondent

The Broncos split a twinbill with UC Riverside Saturday afternoon at Kellogg Field with coach John Scolinos' team winning the nine-inning opener, and the Highlanders taking the seven-inning nightcap by the same 3-1 margin.

For about two hours, Poly had the opportunity of grabbing a share of the CCAA lead by virtue of Howard Ashlock's (3-2) impressive six-hitter in the first game. With the Bronco victory and Highlander loss, coupled with Northridge's win over San Luis Obispo Friday, three of the four entries had three losses.

But Riverside ace Eric Snow, staked to two runs in the first inning and a solo marker in the second frame, checked the scrappy Broncs on one run and five hits.

"Howard did a great job," said Scolinos, after Ashlock's victory in the first game. "He came up with a great curve ball over the last two or three innings. He looked like a big league prospect today.

"We weren't sharp, hitting or defensively, yesterday," continued the Poly skipper of 14 years, "but we had a couple of key hits today and played well in the field. (Jerry) Pitts did a great job filling in for (Kevin) Thornhill (out with a pulled muscle) at second and Harris made some big plays (third baseman) and hit the ball better.

"It's gonna be a dogfight," concluded Scolinos, referring to the league race. "Conceivably a team could lose eight games and still win the league," added assistant baseball coach Gary Marks. "That's how balanced the league is this year."

Poly scored two runs in the first inning of the opener as Pitts walked and moved to third on Pete Alexander's hit-and-run single to right.

Alexander stole second and Pitts scored on Dennis Sherow's ground out. Dale Biggs' fly ball to deep left scored Alexander.

The Broncos' third run was the result of Monte Cloward's single, a double by Pitts and a wild pitch. Riverside scored in the eighth on a wild pitch.

The Highlanders got to Bruce McPherson (1-3) for three runs in the first two innings on five hits and a throwing error in the nightcap. Poly's lone tally came in the fourth on two walks, a fly ball that allowed both runners to advance, and Alexander's ground out.

The Broncos (9-18-1) visit UCLA Tuesday night in non-conference play.

Believe it or not-- 'Hens, Stags split

By GRAHAM CROW
P-B Correspondent

What's that you said? The Angels and Dodgers are both going undefeated from here on out and will meet for the World Championship?

So what.

You heard that Sandy Koufax will come out of retirement to help Walt Alston's pitching staff?

Big deal. You still haven't heard the big baseball story of the day.

Pomona-Pitzer beat Claremont-Mudd in Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference play!

That's right, in a story that Robert Ripley would have trouble topping, the mighty Sagehens downed the conference leading Stags 8-7 in the nightcap of a doubleheader played on the Pomona field.

The opener had been predictable with Claremont-Mudd winning 15-8, but there were some rather noteworthy happenings in that seven inning affair.

Bob Turek had an outstanding game for the Stags as the CMC secondbaseman, batting ninth, blasted three homeruns and a single in four trips to the plate. He drove in eight runs, half of those coming on a grand slammer in the fourth, and scored three times himself.

In the second game the Stags staked ace hurler Norm Richards (0.95 ERA) to two runs in the first and then Steve Lopez hit his second homer of the day to increase the margin to 3-0 in the second.

But the Sagehens exploded for five runs in the bottom of the third. The big blow was a three run roundtripper by Chris Dialynas, a transfer who played JV ball for USC.

It looked as if the Sagehens had once again found a way to lose the ball game for their pitcher Ken Creager. Claremont scored an unearned run in the seventh to pull even at 6-6 as Creager made a wild throw on a double play ball.

In the eighth, the Stags were aided by a balk from Creager and then scored the go-ahead run when first baseman Jim Dembowski dropped a routine fly ball that would have been the third out.

After giving up leadoff hits in the eighth, Richards was replaced by Pat Carrigan who served up a booming two run homer to Nick Dialynas for the deciding margin.

For Pomona, it was a most joyful moment. Now 3-6 in league, the Sagehens will long remember Saturday's 8-7 win. It was the first time in 18 games that Pomona-Pitzer had beaten its cross-campus rival.

The last Sagehen win came in 1969, the same year that Neal Armstrong set foot on the moon.

The split was a small setback for CMC and a giant leap for PP.

Leos split, drop to fourth

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

EAGLE ROCK -- La Verne College split a doubleheader with Occidental Saturday and dropped to fourth place behind Whittier.

The Leopards, now 3-4 in the SCIAC and 13-15-1 overall, were blanked in the first game, 2-0, but came back to win the second, 5-3.

But Whittier was playing Caltech and the almost automatic wins vaulted the Poets (7-5) past the Leos into third place. "It's going to be a struggle," coach Ben Hines admitted. "We've got to depend on other teams knocking off the leaders and helping us."

The Leopards have finished season competition with all the teams ahead of them. On the conference schedule yet are Redlands, Pomona-Pitzer and Caltech. The Sagehens (3-6) are next week's foes while the Stags are meeting Oxy (6-3).

Saturday, La Verne managed only two hits, by Paul Fleming and Nick Leyva off Pete Davis (3-6) in the first game. Loser Dan Quisenberry (6-8) allowed only five, struck out four and didn't walk anyone.

The Leos finally scored a run, without benefit of a hit, in the third inning of the second game. Catcher Bill Stark walked. Designated runner Jerry Leversux stole second, sent to third after a fly to the outfield and scored on a passed ball.

Oxy came back with two in its half of the inning, but a freakish double play stopped the Tigers cold. Fran Kachaturian singled and the runner at second was thrown out at the plate trying to score. Kachaturian himself was then doubled up as he tried to go to second on the play at the plate.

Stark singled in two runs in the fourth and then was banished in the sixth for something he said about the home plate umpire after the umpire had warned the Leos earlier.

Oxy got an unearned run in the sixth on an error, single, infield out and another error. But Leyva and Danny Graham put La Verne in front to stay in the seventh. Leyva singled, stole second, moved to third on an error and scored on Graham's hit.

Ralph Valade, who also had a single and double, homered for insurance in the eighth. Winning pitcher Tim Kelly (5-4) retired eight straight hitters on infield outs in one stretch.

Owls, Panthers lose in M.C. baseball play

Citrus dropped a 7-1 decision at Southwestern and Riverside beat Chaffey, 4-2 Saturday afternoon to knot the Northern Division standings of the Mission Conference in a two-way tie for first place.

Citrus and Riverside share 14-4 records and first place when they meet at Riverside Tuesday at 2:30 p.m.

Southwestern scored single tallies in each of the first three frames Saturday and then knocked the Owls out with a four-run seventh inning.

John Field (6-2) went the distance for the Owls, giving up 15 hits, including some infield singles in the first three innings.

Jim Ayres, Gary Bach and Frank Convertino each had two hits for Citrus.

Chaffey left 14 base runners stranded in its loss to RCC and had a chance to win the game when it loaded the bases in the seventh and eighth and had two aboard in the ninth.

Rufus Thompson and Larry Jones drove in runs for the Panthers with singles in the fourth and seventh innings. Brian Francisco and George Biorkman each had two hits for Chaffey.

But Adams isn't

John is optimistic

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's Tommy John's optimism versus Red Adams' pessimism as the Los Angeles Dodger left-hander tried to make a comeback from a rare and delicate off-season operation to his left elbow.

"If nothing goes wrong and I keep making the progress I've been making, I can get back by August," says the 31-year-old John.

"I'll be very surprised if Tommy John can pitch this year at all," says Adams, the Dodger pitching coach. "If he just comes back and pitches halfway decently next year I'll be happy."

Meanwhile, doctors are mum. They say there is no precedent to John's operation so they have no idea how he'll respond.

"Right now, the main thing is throwing every day and running. I throw 15 or 20 minutes and each day I try to get 10 more pitches in. It depends on how I feel, but so far it feels good. I have no pain and I try to spin curve balls and sliders," John said.

"And I do four to six miles of running every day. I've done a lot of running for years, but now I'm getting my distance up there. I'd like to get the mileage to 10 miles per day."

John, at 6-feet-3 and 185 pounds, is one of the more physical pitchers in baseball, but the injury which halted his career while he was 13-3 last July 17 against Montreal could only be called a freak. It had nothing to do with throwing hard.

"I was just trying to throw a sinking fastball to (Hal) Breeden, trying to get him to hit into a double play," said John. "And it just snapped. I just straightened up and knew something bad had happened. There wasn't any sense in throwing any more that day."

The injury was a ruptured ligament in his left elbow. It was hoped rest would cure it, but the pain persisted.

An operation was performed by Dr. Frank Jobe on Sept. 25. A tendon from John's right forearm was used in the reconstruction of the elbow, a technique which doctors hoped would get John back quicker than other methods.

"Actually," said John, "I'm farther along now than I thought I'd be. In spring training I thought I'd be lobbing the ball, but I was throwing half speed then. Now, I'm throwing close to full speed, but I haven't really thrown hard yet."

"You tend to have problems with the ulnar nerve," John said. "My little finger had been kind of numb, but now I'm getting needles and pins in it so I know the feeling's coming back.

"If I don't do anything foolish and not rush it, I can be back in the lineup before the season is over," he said.

"I'm not so sure," said Adams. "Let's just say I'm realistic and Tommy's very optimistic."

UCLA unveils next season's cage schedule

LOS ANGELES — UCLA's basketball team under new head Coach Gene Bartow opens next season against powerful Indiana University on Nov. 29 at the St. Louis, Mo., Arena, it was revealed today by Bruin athletic Director J. D. Morgan in announcing the 1975-76 season schedule.

Indiana was ranked No. 1 in the polls most of last season and wound up with a great 31-1 record, despite the 92-90 loss to Kentucky in the finals of the Mideast Regional Playoffs. UCLA finished the season with a 92-85 victory over Kentucky to win its 10th NCAA Championship, thus regaining the national title for retiring Coach John Wooden.

The great intersectional rivalry between UCLA and Notre Dame will be continued with the games scheduled at Pauley Pavilion on Jan. 3 and at Notre Dame on Jan. 24.

Included in the 18-game home slate is the biennial Bruin Basketball Classic on Dec. 29-30, a two-day tournament featuring Santa Clara, St. Louis University and the Purdue Boilermakers from the Big 10.

The non-counting game on the schedule is the Nov. 21 season-opener with the Australian National Team at Pauley Pavilion as the Bruin cage preview.

Conference action starts on the road against Oregon and Oregon State, Jan. 9-10, in the Pacific-8, which sent four teams to tournaments at the end of last season.

ATLANTA (AP) — Dave Johnson, who only two years ago shattered a home run hitting record of Rogers Hornsby, has been sold to a Japanese baseball club after clearing waivers, the Atlanta Braves said Friday.

'Reverse discrimination'

The kickball controversy

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP) — Mrs. Maurice J. White vows to spend every last nickel of her income tax rebate and then some to keep her 10-year-old son from being banned by the all-girls Corpus Christi Little Miss Kickball Association.

"If it comes down to it, my husband and I will take it to the Supreme Court," says Diane White, who feels Jeffrey Daniel White is a victim of discrimination.

"We've got girls playing on boy baseball teams and I certainly didn't expect this type of reverse discrimination," says Mrs. White.

The Whites have lost round one.

They were turned down in an attempt to get an injunction against the CCLMKA but have appealed the case to the 13th Dist. Court of Civil Appeals. The three-judge panel is expected to rule sometime in June.

The suit against the CCLMKA claims Jeffrey tried to register twice in the league.

Kickball is played like baseball only the pitcher rolls a soccer-sized ball to the plate and the batter kicks it then runs to first.

"The kids play in shorts and T-Shirts and there is very little body contact," says Mrs. White. "There are no boy leagues in the sport outside of school. I would certainly prefer him to be in a boy's league. We have a 9-year-old daughter, Kirsten, playing in the same kickball league."

Young Jeffrey appeared in District Court, barely visible above the guard railing, at the hearing March 27 in Corpus Christi. He testified he wanted to play kickball with the girls because the boys didn't have a league.

"The defense said we were just out for publicity and I've been told that they thought Jeff might be too rough for the girls," Mrs. White says. "I think it takes a lot of guts for him to want to be the only boy on a team where most of the girls will be 12 and 13 years old. He's probably asking for more than he understands. But we're going to back him. We've already paid $220 in court costs. If we win, maybe we can at least get that back."

Mrs. White says her son didn't care to play baseball this summer and decided on

Mt. Baldy Aquatics swimmers improve

Steven Weck, 7, broke into "A" ranks in the 7-8 division while sweeping the field in the 50 yard freestyle (35.9), the 50 backstroke (44.5) and 50 butterfly (46.6). Weck finished second in the 100 IM (1:37.4) and fourth in the 50 breast (51.6).

Tim Barry, 14, also came home with improved times as he took firsts in the 13-14 class "B" 100 fly (1:09.2) and 200 IM (2:27.1). Barry captured second place in the 100 free (1:00.6), third in the 100 breast (1:25.3), fourths in the 200 free (2:08.2) and 100 back (1:13.5), capping his efforts with a sixth in the 50 free (28.2).

Mike Barry, just aging up to 13-14 competition, followed his brother with a fourth in the 100 fly (1:11.6), fifth in the 100 free (1:03.0) and sixth in the 100 back (1:18.0). Barry took the class "C" 50 free in 28.7 for a personal best in the event.

Twelve year old Todd Kupferer captured second place with a 36.6 and followed with in the 11-12 class "B" 50 back thirds in the 50 free (30.6) and 100 free (1:08.0).

Derek Burns, 10, placed fourth in the 10-and-under "B" 50 free (34.9) and 50 breast (49.3). Burns earned the sixth place award in the 100 IM with 1:33.8.

Rounding out the roster for Mt. Baldy Aquatics was 12 year old David McDevitt. Although failing to place, McDevitt lowered his times in the 200 free, 50 fly and 100 IM for an improved performance for coach Davisson.

For information concerning both novice and AAU team membership in the Claremont, Montclair and Upland areas, contact Mrs. Weck at 982-3430.

Stardust Mel, Astray head field at Hollypark

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — High-weighted Stardust Mel and Astray head a field of 12 expected at the starting gate today for the $114,700 Century Handicap at Hollywood Park.

Stardust Mel comes off victories in two $100,000 races at Santa Anita and Astray was nosed out in the finale there—the $125,000 San Juan Capistrano.

Bill Shoemaker rides Stardust Mel again with Jacinto Vasquez on Astray with each assigned 125 pounds for the 1 3/8-mile test on grass.

In order of post position, the field is expected to have Chief Hawk Ear, Toonder, Montmartre, El Botija, Indefatigable, Barrydown, Stardust Mel, Captain Cee Jay, Cruiser II, Toujours Pret, Blue Times and Astray.

Toujours Pret, a stakes winner in Europe, looks for his first United States victory and must carry 120 pounds with Canadian Sandy Hawley in the irons.

Angel Cordero Jr., flies west to pilot Barrydown who finished sixth in the Capistrano after being among the front runners for a mile in the 1 3/4-mile marathon.

El Botija, who won a division of the Inglewood Handicap over the grass at Hollywood Park, and Montmartre, a Santa Anita stakes winner, each must carry 118 with Jorge Tejeira and Laffit Pincay Jr. the riders.

This first $100,000 race at Hollywood Park this season carries a $68,700 winner's purse with $20,000 for second.

Chief Hawk Ear gets in Jerry Lambert who won the Century in 1970 on Quilche.

Bobby Richardson's South Carolina baseball team will play 50 games this spring. Last season the Gamecocks won 48 of 56 games.

GOLF COURSES at four regional qualifying sites for the National Open Golf Driving Championship have been chosen by the PGA-Tournament Players Division and Golf Digest Magazine.

They are: May 5 — Atlanta, at Canongate G.C. in Palmetto, Ga., May 13 — Los Angeles, at Alondra Park G.C. in Lawndale; May 27 — New York, at Westchester C.C. in Rye; and June 9 — Chicago, Ruth Lake C.C. in Hinsdale.

The National Open Long Driving Championship is open to both professionals and amateurs. Golfers in the four qualifying competitions will each hit three balls in succession at a 40-yard fairway. The three longest drivers at each regional will qualify for the finals on June 24, at Butler National G.C. in Chicago. Entry fee is $10, which goes to the PGA-Junior Golf Fund.

The finalists competing for the championship will include the six leading players from the driving contest for Tour professionals held last August in Atlanta, and the 12 qualifiers from the regional tournaments. Total prize money, including the finals, will be $50,000.

Golfers interested in competing in the regionals should file an intent-to-enter statement in order to assure themselves of a tee time. The statements should be sent to Long Driving Contest, Golf Digest, Box 475, Norwalk, Conn. 06856.

AL GEIBERGER

A first look you have of the Silver Lakes golf course in this high desert resort community near Adelanto, I think you're seeing a mirage.

As observed by former PGA champion Al Geiberger, a veteran of 16 years on the pro golf tour, "Architect Ted Robinson did a fantastic job designing this Silver Lakes course and should get an award for his great accomplishment.

"What impressed me most about the course were its clean lines, rolling fairways and contoured greens. It's definitely not your standard desert course with flat, unimaginative terrain and greens to match. It's an exciting course to play and a fun course, as well."

Geiberger, one of the top players on the tour, is the Silver Lakes Resort's touring professional and director of golf. He will conduct clinics and give exhibitions at the course, which formally opens in late April.

The 27-hole course and clubhouse are part of a $26 million resort community owned by McCulloch Properties, Inc., 116 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

All facilities will be available to property owners, hotel guests and the golfing public.

The plush 65-room hotel and adjoining clubhouse facility were designed as the hub of activity and are close to the first tees for all three nines.

PRO TALK . . . Bruce Crampton observed, "I've accomplished more in golf than I ever expected, but now I would like to win one of the major championships. You could say that is my goal" . . . Tom Weiskopf's string of five birdies (Nos. 10 through 14) in the third round of the Doral-Eastern Open was the longest of the year . . . then Bert Yancey equaled it the next day (Nos. 8 through 12).

Brian (Buddy) Allin said to Gene Williams of the Miami News: "I don't tee it up saying I'm going to win or I've got a good chance. Winning is more of a wish than a realistic goal." . . . Johnny Miller said to Edwin Pope of the Miami Herald, "I can tell when I'm locked in on a course, I get a sixth sense. A calmness comes over me. Other times, I seem to be rushing everything."

kickball to get him ready for football—his favorite sport.

"Jeff took some razzing while he was practicing with the team before he was buzzed, but he handled it well," Mrs. White says. "Most of the mothers want him to play and the coach, Mrs. Ellie Peralez, didn't object to him practicing. But now that's been stopped."

Jeffrey, who is also a Boy Scout, only made one stipulation in asking to play in the girls' league.

"Mom, I don't want to play for the Poodles because they have Pink and White uniforms," he said.

"This thing has gotten funny at home but it's really not very funny when a young boy is being deprived of his civil rights," says Mrs. White. "My husband is a good old-fashioned Southern man who believes boys and girls shouldn't be on the same teams. But he took Jeffrey down to register because he wanted to play so badly."

Carlos Budd, the president of the CCLMKA, says "We feel boys shouldn't be playing against girls in this age group because the average boy is much physically stronger than the average girl. We want to keep some girl from being hurt.

"Now, those girls playing Little League baseball are exceptional athletes for their age. There's one playing on my boy's baseball team. If we open the door to just one boy, then there will be others. Our intent was to find something for the young girls to do besides run up and down the stands at baseball games this summer."

Budd says, "We tried to get financial backing for a boys' league but we just barely got enough money together for the girls' league."

He adds, "This suit came as no surprise. But we are not going to back down at this time. I feel eventually we will have to. I feel the court will probably rule against us because of the Little League situation where the girls are playing on the same team with boys."

United Steelworkers

Tough talking man of steel may lead union

At 36, he looms as the leading candidate to succeed I.W. Abel as head of the United Steelworkers of America, one of the nation's largest labor unions with more than 1.4 million members.

"Unions don't have to go out and hire brain trusts and actuaries," Sadlowski said in a recent interview. "The best ideas and the sharpest min I've ever encountered ar people who drive cranes i steel mills or work on can lines."

Such statements got him elected last year as director of the union's largest district with about 120,000 members in the Indiana steel havens of Gary, Hammond and East Chicago, and South Chicago, Ill.

Sadlowski preaches the dogma of reform to the membership, but his jibes at Abel have angered the leadership in Pittsburgh. Still, Abel must retire as president in 1977 and Sadlowski's hold on the leadership of District 31 makes him the strongest candidate to take control of the union.

It took Sadlowski two elections to win the district leadership post. He was beaten narrowly in 1973 by Sam Evett, the handpicked successor to Joseph Germano, an Abel ally who had led the union district since it was founded before World War II.

The U.S. Labor Department, however, discovered tampering with the election and Evett finally agreed to another vote last year. In the second election, under the eyes of 300 federal agents, Sadlowski won overwhelmingly with 30,127 votes to 20,058 for Evett.

Actually, the bid for the leadership began much earlier for Sadlowski, a handsome man whose black hair shows streaks of gray. Wrinkles and shadows on his weathered face belie his young age, but his rugged hands and shoulders bespeak his work in the mills.

"Even as a kid I can remember the union hall," said Sadlowski, who grew up on Chicago's South Side where his father worked for Inland Steel. "The union was part of the community."

He is a third generation steel worker. His grandfather, Adam Sadlowski, stepped off a boat from Poland at Baltimore in 1894. A laundry ticket in his coat bore his name and his destination: South Chicago. Sadlowski's father, Edward Sr., retired in 1969 after 33 years in the mills.

Sadlowski started at a U.S. Steel plant at 18 as a laborer and then a machinist after a short stint in the Army. He became a grievance committeeman at 22 and was elected president of Local No. 65 at 25.

After two elections to the local post, he joined the union's district staff and has occupied the director's office since last December in East Chicago, Ind., an area where the petroleum refineries and steel mills shape the lifestyles of the townspeople.

"You can be content to sit up in some paneled office. But I'm on the streets going to local meetings day and night; sticking my nose in other people's business," Sadlowski said in his gruff voice that booms with frequent profanity.

Although Sadlowski already sounds like a candidate to head the entire steelworkers' union, he said he hadn't made any final decision. He said he's worried about the impact of economic conditions on the district's workers and the barriers to rank-and-file participation in union policy discussions.

Sadlowski said he's trying to persuade 25 per cent of the locals throughout the nation to call a constitutional convention to change some of the provisions, including the rule that establishes leaders' salaries.

"I don't know anybody in this whole world worth $35,000 a year," Sadlowski said about his salary. "That's working people's money and I'm going to do something about that."

While Sadlowski has been called a reformer, he shies from speculation that change is sweeping through the labor movement.

"It's not a question of electing an Arnold Miller (president of the United Mine Workers of America) or electing an Ed Sadlowski and coming back and saying there's a reform movement," he said. "It boils down to what an Arnold Miller or an Ed Sadlowski is capable of doing. In reality, it boils down to what the institution affords the guy who pays the freight — the rank-and-file member — to exercise total reform."

East St. Louis . . .

tion and cutting off state funds, would not solve the problem either.

"I would hate to say it's gotten to that point," said Inez Galvin, local PTA president, commenting on state takeover. "But if that's the only way to get things moving again, I say do it."

Pessimists, and there are many here, believe there is little to be done for the schools as long as the city itself is depressed.

The once-bustling central business district is sparsely dotted with stores now. Residential neighborhoods neatly kept 10 years ago have a bombed-out look. Random vandalism is evident.

"It doesn't take long," said one former resident. "Within days after people move out a house is stripped of wiring, plumbing fixtures, anything that can be sold. From then on it's just a matter of time befre a fire is started and the place burns to the ground. Some of those old brick homes could never be replaced."

East St. Louis, designated an All-American City in the 1950s, seems locked into a downward spiral, and taking its children with it.

Conference Board predicts:

Economy to recover this year

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Seldom has there been such a solid consensus on the future of the economy as the one that now exists. Almost all forecasters see the likelihood or the probability of a recovery later this year.

Two more important forecasts were added over the weekend, by the First National City Bank and the Conference Board, a nonprofit research and education organization supported mainly by business.

The Conference Board couldn't have been more clear in announcing its outlook. It proclaimed: "With the expected stimulation a tax cut will provide, the odds are now nearly 100 per cent for a recovery in the final quarter."

Even before the tax cut, the board's economists felt that several factors were combining to tilt the odds in favor of recovery: declining rates of inflation, liquidation of inventories, lower cost and more plentiful credit.

Stanley Reber, director of business analysis for the board, notes that wholesale prices fell at an annual rate of 6.2 per cent in the three months ending with February, compared with a 35 per cent jump in the July-September period. Reber believes that inflation likely will remain above 5 per cent, "for evermore." But he adds that the recent monthly figures on wholesale and retail prices support the conclusion that double-digit inflation is dead.

The reduction in the heavy backlog of inventories, largely built up in the latter part of 1974, isn't likely to be as pronounced as the drop in the inflation rate, although Reber looks for a period of stability.

Manufacturers' inventories continued to rise in January, but the increase amounted to only $3 billion compared with $27 billion worth that accumulated in December. A balance between sales and inventories might not be achieved until early 1976, he believes, but the dangerous buildup appears to be over.

The Conference Board cites the five-month decline in the prime interest rate to less than 8 per cent from more than 12 per cent as the reason to be optimistic about the future economy.

"Sufficient liquidity now exists in the U.S. financial markets to allow a recovery to get under way whenever underlying real economic conditions warrant," the report states, adding:

"The acid test for Federal Reserve policy will not occur until late in 1975, when it will be asked to sit back and allow the money supply to rise at nearly double-digit rates for a quarter or two as the recovery picks up ..."

Citibank, while citing some of the same reasons for its optimism, hedged a bit in comparison with the 100 per cent certainty of the Conference Board.

"A recovery is in the making for late 1975," it said, but added that "this recovery, like its predecessors, may be marred by some disappointing although short-lived setbacks."

Its economists do not fear, as many economists do, that the impact of heavy Treasury borrowing will serve to exclude private borrowers from the credit markets in 1975.

It cites as one reason for its optimism that "The counterpart of unusually heavy Treasury borrowing ... is likely to be an unusually large decline in the borrowings of households and businesses."

But it continues, "the judgement concerning the current calendar year does not necessarily hold for the longer run." As the economy recovers from the recession in 1976 and beyond, private demand for credit likely will grow.

Utilities go underground

"In 12 to 18 months there will be no utility poles above ground on Holt Ave.," reports Pomona Mayor Ray Lepire. "All the poles will be put underground."

The project to put the utility poles on Holt Ave. in Pomona underground is financed by the California Edison Co. "The Edison Company," said the mayor, "will contribute over $1.2 million to have the poles put underground."

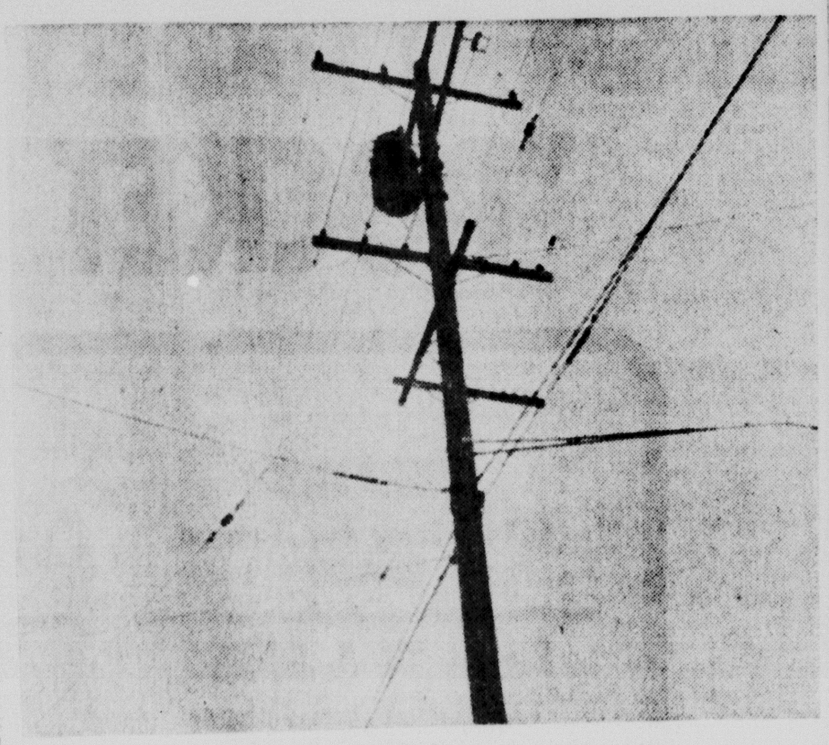
The area affected by the underground poles will be one mile in length.

350 property owners will have the utility poles in front of their present businessess put undergrounds.

According to the mayor the undergrounding of utility poles is bemg done in an effort to beautify Pomona.

The first phase of undergrounding utilities along Holt Avenue was begun in 1971 and included the undergrounding of utilities in the area of Holt Avenue between Ganesha Avenue and Dudley Street.

Bids for undergrounding utilities on the remainder of the street will go out in one month, reports the Pomona Valley Chamber of Commerce.



SOON TO DISAPPEAR

These utility poles on Holt Avenue in Pomona will be removed next year and new utility lines will be put underground.

OFFICE OF THE FUTURE

The portable office of the future has a hookup that will fit into any electrical outlet and immediately connect it with a master computer. Douglas Engelbart, Director of Stanford Research Institute's Augmentation Research Center, pictured above makes changes in the displayed text by moving a pointer on the screen to the desired location and typing the change with the five finger keyset (in his left hand) or the keyboard. Immediately the revised text appears on the screen.

Researchers develop portable office

MENLO PARK — Tomorrow's executive might take his "office" with him on business trips, says Stanford Research Institute (SRI).

According to a recent article in SRI's quarterly publication "Investments in Tomorrow," the traveling executive could hook an electronic terminal with keyboard and screen to his hotel room phone and "talk" to his computer back at the office.

He could instruct the computer to sort his mail, display urgent items on the screen or send messages to colleagues at his home office or elsewhere.

He could even add a few paragraphs to a proposal he left back in his computerized file, having the computer display it in whole or part along with changes as he made them.

According to the article, such computerized activities already are routine for a few office workers at SRI and other organizations in the U.S. and abroad that have access to a computer network called the ARPANET.

Built under the sponsorship of the Advanced Rearch Project Agency (ARPA) of the Department of Defense, this newtork interconnects computers all over the world into a single network.

The electronic revolution is coming to the traditional office world too, the article predicts, "just as it already has come to the accounting department, the news room, the stock exchange and the airline reservation counter."

And when this revolution does come, the article notes, it will radically change office working habits and relationships, giving new flexibility to both the executive and the secretary.

Already, the article says, the so-called "word processing typewriter" is changing the boss's relationship with his secretary and the way secretaries do their work.

This typewriter looks much like a standard electronic typewriter with a conventional keyboard, the article nots, but it also has limited memory, consisting of magnetic tape or cards, and logic capabilities.

When the typist types on the keyboard, the keystrokes are not only recorded on paper but also on a tape or card that automatically can be searched and selectively edited.

Thus, the typist can instruct the machine to search through the tape or card, stop it at a particular location and delete certain words or add new words that are typed into keyboard.

According to Alan Purchase, a senior industrial economist, word processors can add substantially to office productivity. For example, he said two such machines can do the work of three or more standard electric typewriters.

But word processors cost anywhere from $5,000 to $15,000 more than standard electric typewriters, he said, so they have to be fully utilized to achieve these savings.

As a result, he noted, most users have formed special word processing groups to handle the work of several executives.

This arrangement has compensations for both executives and secretaries, the article says. In exchange for giving up the convenience and prestige of a private secretary, for example, executives can dictate whenever they wish and obtain multiple drafts of their work without fear of antagonizing a typist.

The market for word processors is growing rapidly. By 1980, Purchase said, up to 15 per cent of all typewriters used in business might be word processors. There are 200,000 such machines now in use, he said, and the number might double in two to three years.

More than a dozen companies now manufacture word processors, he said, including IBM and Xerox.

Man on the Street Interview

How will you spend your tax rebate?

On March 30, President Ford told the American people of his economic plan to cut the tax bill. The American people were told that beginning in May of this year 72 million taxpaying Americans would begin receiving 1974 tax rebate checks, varying from $100 to $200.

P-B's On the Street Interviewer asked these taxpayers: What will you do with your tax rebate?

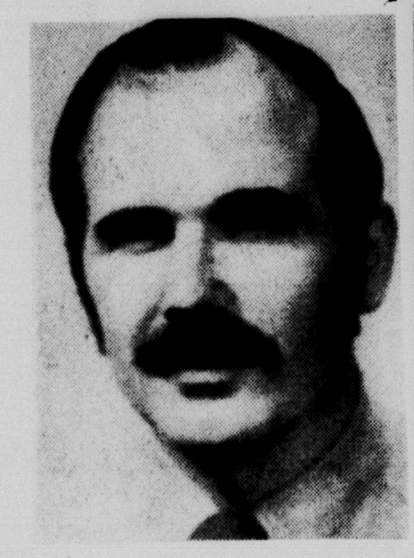
"Well, I had to borrow money last fall to put a new engine into my car. So, I'm going to try and pay the loan off."

PHYLLIS MURPHY, right

"I'm going to buy Pampers for my baby."

JIM VANSICKLE, Left

"I'm gonna use Ford's rebate to pay Nixon's bills. Seriously, though, I'm going to use the money to help send my wife to Germany to see her family."



BRUCE HOWARD, right

"I'm gonna put it right back into the economy. I might buy my kids some new clothes or invest in a good stereo. My wife and I talked about an anniversary trip to San Diego for a weekend, too. Money turns me on better than any drug ever could."

WILLIE WHITE, left

"I'm going to remodel my home. I'm going to build a fence around my house."

LARRY WOODS

"Maybe I'll use it to buy a new bicycle or buy a new swimsuit for the beach. I think what I'll probably do is put it into savings to pay next year's taxes."

'75 consumer likes comfort

By CHARLES L. NASH JR.

Yes, the consumer likes his comfort and his cleanliness. We are finding that he is being very discriminating in his choice of the means to accomplish this goal.

This year of 1975 has produced more equipment which gives higher performance with less energy consumption. The buyer is interested in upgrading his purchases to include the most efficiency that can be built into air conditioning, heating and cleaning products.

For instance, at Nash's Air Conditioning in Pomona we have products in 1975 which will produce three tons of cooling for 25 per cent less electricity than units which were sold just 1½ years ago. This means that despite a 20 per cent increase in cost of electricity, the operating cost can go down.

Consumers are being more particular about the quality of the air now-a-days. More and more people recognize the value of high filtration in their systems. Filtration which can keep the home smog free, pollen free and control staining particles which are microscopic in size. These particles are so small that it takes 25,000 of them to measure one inch.

In short we find that our customers and the general public are getting wiser and smarter about their purchase of home comfort equipment. We as a business welcome this attitude and we think that it creates prosperity and customer satisfaction when the consumer shops for the best product for the least price instead of shopping for the least expensive equipment just to cool off a bit.

The wisest consumer also learns how to care for his equipment or have it done periodically so that its efficiency is maintained.

Let's all keep up the positive thinking and maybe this Pocket of Prosperity will expand out from Pomona.

RECYCLED ALUMINUM

Don Cato, swing man between San Dimas and El Monte recycling stations, is shown preparing aluminum cans and other clean scrap to be crushed for processing. The San Dimas recycling station is located at 1039 W. Arrow Highway.

Recycling center buys aluminum beverage cans

The recycling center in San Dimas, located at 1039 W. Arrow Highway, offers valley residents 15 cents a pound or $300 a ton for aluminum beverage cans and other clean household aluminum scrap.

Reynolds Metals Co. of Los Angeles, owners of the center, have taken a vacant service station and turned it into a permanent service center for aluminum recycling.

Brad Hottyzer, center manager, encourages groups and individuals to collect aluminum soft drink or beer cans for recycling.

"We started on March 30 of this year and the response has been great. We encourage persons to recycle, it saves energy and resources," said Hottyzer.

In addition to running the recycling center, Hottyzer is available to talk to school and different service groups.

"I'd be happy to help any school or group to set up a recycling program to raise funds. In fact," he added, "any group wishing to use a portion of the center to raise funds is welcome to do so. This includes any group wanting to have a car wash or a bake sale. As long as they ask me first, it's okay."

In addition to accepting empty cans, the center accepts other clean household scrap aluminum such as TV dinner trays, pie pans and patio furniture cut in 12-inch lengths without fabric.

The center is open Tuesdays through Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The store is open from 10:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 11:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. on Sundays.

CASA COLINA BREAKS GROUND

Holding a golden shovel used in groundbreaking ceremonies held 16 years ago for the present hospital building at Casa Colina Hospital in Pomona, is Dr. Arthur Madorsky, medical director at the hospital. Madorsky is breaking the ground in a symbolic gesture before construction of the hospital's new clinical services building and teaching center is begun. Those present at the ceremony are, from left, Dr. Madorsky; Charles Badar, Pomona Councilman; Al Frederickson, faculty specialist; Dale Eazell, executive vice president for Casa Colina; and John Cashion from Berry Construction Co.

Valley hospital services expand

The phenomenal growth of hospital services available to Pomona Valley residents was symbolized this week with the groundbreaking ceremonies for yet another new medical facility.

The expansion program at Casa Colina Hospital, 255 E. Bonita Ave., Pomona, included the traditional turning of dirt by civic and medical leaders for the hospital's new clinical services building and teaching center.

The 14,000-foot addition, architecturally harmonious and adjacent to the present building, will be comprised of expanded outpatient therapy space, speech therapy area, a vocational development center, a teaching center, offices, a gift shop and lobby.

Space for vocational evaluation of disabled clients is also included.

The addition has been achieved through a grant from the State Department of Rehabilitation and a matching commitment by Casa Colina, according to Dale Eazell, executive president of the hospital, the cost is $800,000.

Other recent additions to Casa Colina are the San Gabriel Valley Regional Center for the Developmentally Disabled due to open in May, and an expanded Children's Development center.

Casa Colina represents a bright element of economic development in the valley, Eazell said.

"Two years ago the hospitals provided approximately $1,500,000 in rehabilitation services," he added. "Last year, this figure increased to $2 million and this year, the figure will be closer to $5 million."

He estimated that the figure will reach $8 million next year.

Eazell added that these increases represent significantly increased payroll and purchases, but most importantly, they represent vital growth in the hospital's ability to provide needed human service.

Proof positive of Pomona Valley Community Hospital's confidence in the future of the Pomona Valley is an $8.5 million project, including equipment, which began in 1972, according to Robert Burwell, administrator.

The hospital, 1798 N. Garey Ave., Pomona, will open its new outpatient and critical care center to the community in late July.

Always keeping pace with the growth of the valley, PVCH added a $1 million, four-story addition in 1956, another six-story wing was added in 1963 and the final, $8.5 million, three-story and basement facility will be completed in 1975, added Burwell.

A staff of approximately 1,000 employes is involved in running the 332-bed hospital, which soon will have 389 beds.

There were nearly 4,000 major surgical operations performed at PVCH in 1974 and 3,500 minor surgical operations. Doctors delivered 1,489 new infants last year and treated a total of 14,291 admitted patients. In addition, the emergency room treated 37,100 people through its facility.

Area hospitals continue to grow

Fifty-one beds will be added for the care of the critically ill in the new intensive care, coronary care and post-coronary care units to be opened soon. Patients will be monitored by the latest electronic instrumentation.

The 8,000-square-foot physical therapy department was designed by Charles M. Magistro and includes a complete gymnasium, 11 treatment rooms and a large hydrotherapy area.

In addition, the entire cardio-respiratory department will be located in the new building along with a 400-seat auditorium, 10 well-equipped classrooms, and a complete medical library.

The hospital cooperates with Mt. San Antonio College in its nursing programs and also participates in an X-ray technologist training program.

Pomona Valley Community Hospital admitted 400 new patients with cancer in 1974. It's radiology department has complete diagnostic and radiation facilities for evaluation and treatment, including a $200,000 Linear Accelerator.

The amount of supplies and materials needed to operate PVCH is indeed a boon to the local economy, Burwell pointed out.

Hospital employes contributed $18,500 to the United Crusade for 1975, making them the largest non-agency contributor in Los Angeles County. This money is funneled back into service agencies for those who require financial assistance to obtain needed medical attention, according to the administrator.

Since the opening of San Dimas Community Hospital in October 1972, the hospital at 1350 W. Covina Blvd., San Dimas, has provided the patients, doctors and community with excellent patient care and community services.

The hospital has an all registered nurse staffing plan, stated David Robinson, hospital administrator. In addition, it has round-the-clock emergency service plus the ancillary services of an acute hospital. A recent addition to the X-ray department is a Mammography unit for the detection of cancer of the breast.

Just recently, the San Dimas Community Hospital became a base hospital for four different paramedic ambulance companies.

The hospital's community education program is outstanding, Robirson reported. In addition to monthly prenatal classes for the expectant parents, monthly educational program range from the topics of drug abuse to pool side safety, all presented by physicians, nurses and paramedics.

Tentative plans for the construction of a medical office building adjacent to the hospital are presently on the drawing board.

The Chino General Hospital, 5451 Walnut Ave., Chino, is also expanding its services to better serve the growing Pomona Valley.

Opened in 1972, the 118-bed acute care hospital offers full services including an intensive care and coronary care unit and an emergency room staffed by physicians around the clock. Classified as a "primary emergency room facility," the Chino hospital's emergency room has a complete x-ray department and laboratory ready to help in any emergency, said Dean Garrison, administrator.

Other services available to outpatients include physical therapy and inhalation therapy.

Chino General Hospital has been accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals, added Garrison.

The 24-hour emergency room was tripled in size, with additional room being used for the Paramedic Base Station facilities at the hospital, according to Ronald W. Porter, administrator.

Glendora Community Hospitals has also recently added a third x-ray room. A PhoGamma camera was installed in the nuclear medicine department and other new diagnostic equipment includes Xerography, for the detection of breast cancer, and Untrasound.

The administrative offices were relocated, as was pediatrics, and the entire hospital has been redecorated, added Porter.

The Glendora hospital has cooperated for several years with Citrus College in its licensed vocational nurse program. In September, it affiliated with Pasadena City College in its newly offered two-year associate degree program for radiologic technicians.

A few years ago, Glendora Community Hospital purchased the property across the street from the hospital on which a majestic, century-old Moreton Bay fig tree continues to flourish. Later this month, a dedication ceremony is planned for "Glendora Bicentennial Big Tree Park," which is a cooperative effort by the City of Glendora and the hospital to preserve the tree and establish a mini-park for the community.

Doctor's Hospital of Montclair opened in 1972 with 99 beds and has continued to expand its facilities.

It is now in the process of completing the expansion of its radiographic room for sophisticated radiological programs and heart catheterizations.

Ron Messenger, administrator of the Montclair hospital, said construction for the new unit will be completed at the end of this month and the first heart catheterizations are scheduled about June 1. This will be the only lab of its type in the valley, Messenger said.

Doctors' Hospital, 5000 San Bernardino St., Montclair, has also enlarged its emergency treatment room to an eight-bed unit and has applied to be a paramedic base station serving the West End community.

Additional meeting and conference rooms have been added to the hospital since its opening in 1972, which aids in the on-going educational programs conducted there. The administration and staff of the hospital cooperate with Mt. San Antonio College and Montclair High School for training programs, including an in-service program for high school students interested in paramedic careers.

In the radiology department, a nuclear scanner has been added to facilitate the determining of abnormalities. Ultra-sound equipment is used to determine malfunctions.

Data Pomona available now

The Pomona Chamber of Commerce has announced that the 1975 edition of "Data Pomona" has just been completed. The 48-page book is an in-depth statistical report on Pomona's economic market and growth expectations.

The report contains such information as retail sales, typical wage rates, and average family incomes. The publication also contains information on the availability of land and on the requirements for obtaining utility services.

This guide, used by firms interested in locating in the Southern California area, presents the economic statistics on Pomona and describes the many assets that the community has to offer.

Among the assets are the major freeways which serve Pomona. The Ontario International Airport and Brackett Field are positive assets which provide services for air cargo, private aircraft, and commercial flights which are needed by business. The availability of quality utilities services in Pomona is another positive factor which Data Pomona covers. Also discussed are the fine educational facilities within the Pomona area. This, along with recreational facilities like Bonelli Park and the Baldy resort area are again definite assets that the Pomona area has to offer to prospective developers.

General Dynamics Pomona recruiting more employees

Employment at General Dynamics Pomona Division has been on the upswing. The labor force at the facility has increased by approximately ten per cent since the start of the year and more personnel are being recruited. Current employment is more than 4,500.

The 150-acre establishment located west of the City of Pomona is designed for engineering development, test and evaluation, and manufacture of tactical defense systems. During the past twelve months a number of multimillion dollar contracts have been received by the Division. Among these were $6.5 million for a Standard Missile-2 engineering development contract, Standard ARM funding of approximately $3.1 million, $12.4 million for the Phalanx Weapon System, and a production contract of $22.6 million for the Standard Missile-1 program.

Standard Missile is the U.S. Navy's primary surface-to-air missile system, also used by a number of navies within the free world. Standard ARM is an air-to-surface and surface-to-surface missile being produced for both the Navy and the Air Force. Phalanx, a closed loop gun concept, is currently under development by Pomona Division for the U.S. Navy.

Recently, the company received a $2.5 million contract for facility modernization. This funding will enable the Division to continue making necessary improvements and installing additional equipment to operate efficiently. Modernization projects completed during 1974 included complete modernization of the circuit board fabrication area; addition of quality controlled equipment for automatic checking of electronic components (transistors, resistors, diodes); equipment for automatic insertion of components in circuit boards; and major improvements in the working environment through improved lighting, humidification, and decor in the electronic assembly area. This section encompasses approximately 250,000 square feet (5¾ acres) of the manufacturing building. New ceilings and floor tile were installed in the engineering building, an on-going project at the present time.

Modernization plans for the future include completion of a wastewater treatment system that complies with the latest EPA standards; installation of a 23,000-square-foot hybrid microcircuit assembly facility; construction of a process control laboratory to monitor in-process materials and the wastewater treatment facility; construction of a new Standards Calibration Laboratory for improved calibration capability on test equipment; construction of a new engineering antenna test range for the development and production testing of missile antennas; and the purchase of equipment that will substantially improve capability to produce intricate circuit boards and microelectronic devices.

Store offers free bulletin

L. A. Del Santo, President of Vons Grocery Co., has announced the inauguration of a new Consumer Bulletin. The publication will be known as Vons Value Planner and will be distributed free each week in all Vons Markets.

"In recent months," Santo said, "we have received numerous requests from our customers and consumer groups asking that we produce an informative piece of material which would assist homemakers and answer questions they have regarding nutritional value of foods. It will also help in offering information on food preparation and shopping tips. Further, we will be able to inform our customers when certain commodities are in abundance and prices have dropped on these items, making them a more economical meal helper," he said. As a bonus for shoppers, each week the Value Planner will contain four money-saving coupons.

FOR 50 YEARS THE POMONA MAUSOLEUM HAS BEEN DEDICATED TO POMONA FAMILIES

Constructed in 1925 with space for only three hundred and eighty crypts, the Pomona Mausoleum built a second unit at the north entrance to the Pomona Cemetery with a total of seven hundred and forty four crypts. Since World War II five additions have been compleated and at the present time the Pomona Mausoleum will accommodate 14,000. This makes it one of the largest in any community this size in the country.

For information regarding the Mausoleum's pre-payment, plan, you are invited to our office.... Small monthly payments with no interest or carrying charges.

Airlines woo customers with "simulation" fares

After many successful years of wooing the family out of the car into the plane, the airlines were caught in the energy crunch of early 1974. They petitioned the Civil Aeronautics Board (C.A.B.) to increase fares but were advised to eliminate all promotional fares such as family plan, excursions, youth fares, etc.

Now, the recession has prodded the C.A.B. to allow "stimulation" fares such as the "infamous" Fly Me . . . but don't expect FRILLS" airline slogan. Bi-centennials and 7-30 excursion fares are in again which specify a passenger must book seven days before departure, must pick up tickets and pay for them seven days before departure, must stay a minimum of seven days but no more than 30 days.

Also, United "Layaway Plan, American's Look-Ahead, and TWA's Demand Scheduling" all condition the passenger to make reservations for a specific departure date at least 60 days prior to that date. There is a $20 one way cancellation fee which applies only between East Coast and West Coast cities. The newest domestic and international conditional fare is the APEX. (Advanced Purchase Excursion Plan) which again entices one to plan ahead at least 60 days and stick within certain specific but not unreasonable limitations. The savings in high summer season could be as high as $139 per person Los Angeles to London. Minimum stay is 22 days and maximum is 45.

No tremendous efforts have been extended yet to the passenger by the steamship lines. The air-sea packages are such a good buy that it would be unreasonable to expect more. Commencing at $495 per person, including round trip air to Miama, transfer to ship and seven days of luxurious sailing in the Caribbean with all meals included falls within the budget of most "working people". General trend is to more moderate priced rooms but the old sea traditional booking procedures still sells out the bottom and the top rooms first with the preponderance from moderate rates down. Tour operators report that heavy bookings are being made for April, May and early June but they are scheduling less departures insuring that most of them will depart with full bookings. Last past several years they have scheduled too many, too often, hence diluting each departure. Food costs, also skyrocketing overseas, make it a bargain to have a tour which includes modified American plan, two meals a day.

In summary, those who can afford to travel are doing so now. They rationalize that next year it will cost more, maybe certain destinations will be eliminated from itineraries due to political pressures or internal stresses, and finally it is possible our government will frown upon foreign travel and the money that is wooed away from our own coffers and therefore will set up restrictions of some kind.

Travel is still a happy commodity and a habit that one will eliminate only if absolutely necessary.

Inexpensive air flight may become reality soon

OAKLAND — The Civil Aeronautics Board's (CAB) proposed liberalization of charter tour flights rules, if approved as issued recently "could mean that low-cost air transportation will become a reality for additional millions of Americans, according to Henry P. Huff, President of Trans International Airlies (TIA), a major U.C. charter carrier and a subsidiary of Transamerican Corp.

Huff predicted that "about 10 million people could take advantage of low-cost charter travel if the liberalied proposals were put into effect, instead of the 4.5 million passengers now being carried on charter flights."

The TIA executive also said the new proposal "would generate new traffic for the flagging airline industry and create new profit opportunities for travel agents."

The new CAB proposal would allow individuals to fly on a charter tour flight to a single city without being members of a group.

They could purchase tickets 15 days in advance of a domestic flight, or 30 days before an international charter. They would pay a minimum of $15 daily for land arrangements. Domestic tours need only be four days duration and international tours would last a minimum of seven days.

Previously, if an individual wished to join a non-affinity charter flight he would have to agree to travel to at least three separate cities and pay 10 per cent of the lowest scheduled airline fare.

Huff said the new proposal "would cut charter tour restrictions to a minimum. It would enable people to purchase a low-cost ticket simply and with a minimum of red tape directly from their local travel agent," he said.

The TIA president believes the new proposal would be of great benefit not only to the users of air transportation, but highly advantageous to the airlines and the travel industry.

"During the current economic downturn, airline volume has fallen rather sharply, particularly on international routes where much of the traffic is vacation travel," Huff said.

"The one-stop charter tour proposal should stimulate airline traffic by appealing to those millions of Americans who either cannot afford the present scheduled fares or are ineligible for low-cost charters," he said.

The TIA official also believes the new CAB proposal would "open for the first time new and profitable business for thousands of retail agents throughout the nation.

Cal Poly markets produce

Students at Cal Poly grow produce as part of their regular classroom assignments. They tend to their crops on acreage provided for their use by the college.

Cal Poly provides for student use, 50 acres of orchards, 30 acres of vegetables crop land and over 500 acres of land for hay and grain.

After the student has completed his project and harvested his crop the remaining product is turned over to the university to be sold. The produce is sold by the Cal Poly Citrus Club under the supervision of the Agricultural Department.

The Citrus Club markets the produce in the fruit and crops unit on campus. This unit is located in a large outlining building on Citrus Lane, which is a road located off the main entrance. All produce is sold by the pound.

"We sell everything," said Albert Canhan, Cal Poly protessor in charge of orchid operations and food industry. "Right now we're selling all kinds of citrus fruit. Our prices are under the retail market price and a little higher than the wholesale price. We do not however differentiate between kinds of oranges, grapefruits, etc. The price is the same for the same type of fruit or vegetable."

Cal Poly students have just planted lettuce, melons and corn. According to Canhan, green onions should be mature soon and ready to be sold.

In 1974 the Citrus Club sold 15 tons of fruit and 2 tons of vegetables. Receipts for the year totaled $8,500.

HOME CANNING

Mrs. Dan Baird of Pomona is shown putting vegetables into a water bath for cooking. Each vegetable is timed according to a time chart and cooked with the jar lids slightly open

3 families cut food costs

By Marianne Woods
P-B Staff Writer

Mrs. Dan Baird of Pomona, her mother-in-law, Mrs. Margaret Baird of Claremont and an old friend Mrs. Cal Hazlrig of Ontario get up every morning during the summer at 6 a.m.

As three housewives, their summer work will have them out gathering fruits and vegetables early in the morning to be back in the kitchen no later than 8 a.m. They will work in the kitchen until late in the evening, quitting no later than 11 p.m. This will go on for two to three months, until they've canned and frozen enough fruit and vegetables to see their families through the fall, winter and spring.

"We've always freezed and canned," said the elder Mrs. Baird. "When I was five or six years old, I remember pealing vegetables for my mother to can mince meat."

"I have too," said Mrs. Baird, "In fact when I told my mother, who lives in Tennessee, that you were doing a story on us canning, she asked, 'Why? Doesn't everybody can?' Not in California Mother, I said."

"With the money I save by canning," said Mrs. Baird the mother of two children age 4 and 12, "I just can't afford not to can and freeze. Last year Mrs. Baird froze three bushels of green beans for her family to eat. The beans cost her only $3. "I figure I saved 100 percent over the store cost by canning my own beans. Why green beans sell in the store for 36 cents a can."

One of the secrets the trio have in securing the freshest vegetables and fruits is to become friends with the persons who operate the fruit and vegetable stands.

"We make friends with the people that run the stands in Chino, Rialto and Fontana," said Mrs. Baird. "They know us as steady customers and go out of their way to get the freshest of vegetables. This is absolutely important that the vegetables be fresh. Also, by going to the stands we eliminate the middleman, we save money and the farmers save money."

The three women will call the stands at 6 a.m. and then go out to pick up such items as fresh corn, green beans, tomatoes, squash, green peppers, peaches, okra, black eyed peas and boysenberries. Depending on how far they must go to pick up the vegetables and fruits they will be back in the kitchen cooking no later than 8 a.m. They will be canning in May with strawberries, but their fulltime routine will not begin until late June or July.

"The reason we start so early is because we gotta cook and can or freeze while it's still fresh, said Mrs. Hazelrig. "Take corn for example," she explained, "You have to cook and freeze or can corn within six hours after it has been picked or else the sugar in it will turn to starch."

Mrs. Hazelrig usually buys from one to two lugs of any particular vegetable or fruit. A lug of corn, for example, will contain five dozen ears.

Shortcut to ownership:

Refurbishing home can be 'adventure'

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Some young people are finding solutions to the housing problem by investing in old houses "that need remodeling." It is not only a shortcut to home ownership, but an adventure as well, they are likely to decide. But it can be a costly adventure, some have found, with its demands of time and money for many, many years.

Replacing windows in an old house may be the first priority before patching up rooms, and it can be quite an investment, one couple learned. They had an estimate of $7,000 to replace windows in a big, old 12-room house, a Victorian-style that they had bought for $29,500. Unfortunately, the man is not a do-it-yourselfer, which would have cut the cost of remodeling considerably. He had thought about trying his hand but confronted with sills, heads, jambs and frames which also needed replacing before windows could be installed, he gave up. If the majority of frames had not been rotten, he might have attempted the project.

After buying the house, they called in someone to ask how it could be made whole again and how it could be made livable and how much it would cost. To make it livable, it would cost $21,000 and to turn it into a "finished house" would cost twice that much, one expert evaluator maintained. They could shave the cost of painting the interior and exterior, which they planned to do. Even so the fretwork, turrets, bays and so on would make it difficult.

They hadn't even thought about heating problems when they bought it, but there was a good forced air system. But the choice high ceilings which they loved make the heat bill a major cost factor.

The old weatherbeaten roof had many shingles missing and each roofer advised that it should be completely reshingled, especially since the couple was hoping to replace eventually the badly cracked and patched ceilings in upstairs bedrooms.

The big, old fireplace had looked cozy but it needed considerable work before it could be made operable, they were told. Brick joints had lost mortar and chimney flues were thick with soot. The couple had planned to sit in front of a roaring fire even as the place sagged around them while they were remodeling it, but now the chimney would be among the first repairs.

Then, too, there was the wet basement they had noticed before they bought the house but had decided was due to its having been unoccupied for so long. Now they would have to face up to that and the foundation which needed repairs as well as the basement.

Although some floors and stairs squeaked, and boards were cracked and gouged in some areas, there were no warped boards.

Upon sober reflection on the costs involved they decided they loved the house no matter what, and that they would realize a good return on their investment if they took the time (and money) required to do a good job of remodeling it. Neither likes home developments, condominiums or apartment living. They wanted some land which they had with the two-acre dwelling and they "wanted a house that looked like a house."

They would do "first things first," and once all the necessary repairs were out of the way, they would take their time doing the house themselves.

Would they have bought this house knowing what they now know?

"I think we would have been a little wary about it and we might even have been scared," says the young husband, "but I think we would have been optimistic enough to think we could pull it off."

In his wife's words, "If you find a house that you think will provide you with happiness, you should be willing to make any sacrifice to acquire it. Imagine what we will have, if we ever get it finished," she said with a sigh.

In their late 20s, what they have is time. The young lawyer with a good future feels he will be able to hire someone to do a lot of the work on of these days. If the house becomes too big to handle, "we can aways sell it and get our money out of it," he said.

Proposed bills on land uses being opposed

Land use legislation now before Congress is inconsistent with the nation's housing goals, said an official of the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB).

John C. Hart, an Indianapolis builder and the NAHB first vice president outlined the housing industry's objections to the proposed Land Use and Resource Conservation Act of 1975 at a recent House subcommittee hearing.

"Any land use policy must balance the basic human needs of a still expanding national population and legitimate environmental concerns," he declared.

While builders are committed to balanced and rational land use policies, Hart said they oppose the current proposal because it ignores the nation's housing needs and concentrates chiefly on environmental issues.

"Land use issues should be resolved by local governments which are best equipped to respond quickly and effectively to a community's present and future growth needs as well as to environmental concerns.

"The federal role should be in the area of broad policy making and in providing necessary funds to develop, coordinate and reconcile state and local land use policies," said Hart.

He reported the bill shifts too much planning responsibility from the local level to the states, and creates a jungle of red tape between many remote federal and state agencies.

Definitions in the bill of such terms as "are of state concern" and "large scale subdivisions or development projects" are so vague, Hart said, that they invite burdensome state regulations and controls of excessive land areas.

The bill also fails to deal with such problems as large-lot zoning, no-growth restrictions, arbitrary limits on population and exclusion of housing for lower income families, he said. Instead, the bill encourages new and far reaching development controls which would effectively thwart sensible and needed growth and increase the already skyrocketing costs of land and housing.

Another fundamental weakness, Hart said, is that the legislation would be administered by the Interior Department which is primarily responsible for the sparsely settled areas of the West. If any further federal land use legislation is needed it should fall under the jurisdiction of the Department of Housing and Urban Development which has a great deal more experience in dealing with land use problems in cities, towns and villages, he said.

Memorial Day honors dead

CHICAGO (AP) — Though no one knows when Memorial Day, often called Decoration Day, originated, it is believed to have been first observed by grieving Southern women during the Civil War. The women, says The World Book Encyclopedia, chose May 30 to decorate the graves of both Union and Confederate soldiers.

Now, Americans observe this national holiday to honor those who lost their lives in all the country's later wars, including the Spanish American War (1898-1899), World War I (1917-1918), World War II (1941-1945), the Korean War (1950-1953) and the Vietnam War.

Lewis Homes:

Large sites attracting home buyers to project

The appeal of living on a horse ranch in "bridle trail" country is a strong selling point for homes at the Ranchos Del Sol development in Fontana.

Only six homes remain to be sold, said Roger Lewis, vice president of Lewis Homes. Each house is located on a half acre lot.

The large lots are also attracting home buyers who don't plan to keep horses. They simply want the spacious home environment that is becoming hard to find, he added.

The homes are priced from $31,000, which includes refrigerated air conditioning. Qualified veterans may move in for an initial cost of $99.

The houses feature wood-burning fireplaces, cathedral ceilings, marble pullman tops and garden kitchens.

Buyers have their selection of three or four bedrooms. All homes have two bathrooms.

Rancho Del Sol is located at Oleander Avenue and Aliso Drive near Fontana. To reach the project persons may take the San Bernardino Freeway to Citrus Avenue, go south to Slover Avenue, east to Oleander Street and then north to the model houses.

Improved sales projected for existing home market

Improved availability of mortgage money, generally lower interest rates and somewhat tighter rein on inflation are expected to spur sales of existing homes during the remainder of 1975.

But the construction of new homes for the year may not surpass last year's depressed rate.

These are findings made by the National Association of Realtors and included in a report issued for Realtor Week.

Ken Kerin, director of the association's economic and research department, added two qualifying statements to his prediction for existing home sales.

"First the pace of recovery from 1974 will be modest and will not match the robust growth rates recorded during prior periods of expansion.

"And there still is a danger that a resurgence of finlation will cause reversal in monetary policy, sending interest rates back through the roof once again.

"If that should happen, there would be little cause for even modest optimism concerning expansion in existing home sales activity," he added.

Kerin said the much-heralded improvement in mortgage credit during the final quarter of 1974 was slow in stimulating sales of either existing or new homes. This, he explained, was due primarily to consumer caution brought about by a number of factors:

— The question of whether inflation could be brought under control still was paramount in the minds of most Americans.

— Fearful of unemployment, many potential buyers were reluctant to assume the greater morgage debt associated with moving up the housing ladder.

However, February marked the end of a year-long slump in existing home sales, and, barring a reversal in the mortgage market, the sales outlook remains favorable for the remainder of 1975.

As for new home construction, the picture is not as encouraging. Kerin anticipates that there will be no measurable increase in construction over the 1.35 million annual rate in 1974.

This is largely due to the fact that there was an inventory of about 400,000 unsold new homes at the end of 1974 to carry into 1975, he explained. However, he feels that a tax credit measure approved as part of the tax reduction bill should help eliminate that inventory.

The measure allows buyers of homes under construction by this past March 25 a tax credit of 5 per cent on the purchase price, up to a $2,000 maximum.

The picture for multi-family unit construction also is cloudy, Kerin says. "Despite a favorable rental market and improvements in the availability of mortgage money, multi-family starts this year will be slow in recoverings from their extremely depressed level."

Single-family home starts in 1974 were off about 20 per cent from year-earlier totals, but multi-family construction dropped more than 50 per cent, Kerin noted.

"Problems plaguing this segment of the industry (multi-family) include concern over land use and environment, pending taxreform legislation and accelerating operating expenses," he added.

Although the total outlook for the near term is relatively uncertain, Kerin sees the long-term outlook as good.

"Once normal supply and demand relationships are restored, the market will put forth increased levels of housing production to provide for replacement of substandard units, and to accommodate the rising rate of household formation expected during the remainder of the decade.

"The fastest growing segment of the population will be in the 25-to 35-year-old group. Housing demand by this age group always has been strong and is a positive factor in the outlook for both the existing and new home markets," he added.

Finally, Kerin called attention to an expected trend in new home construction during 1975: Homes will be smaller with fewer bedrooms and more entertainment areas.

Factors influencing this change, he said, are the rapid growth of single-person households and smaller families and concern over the availability and cost of energy.

On this last point, Kerin added, "to a greater degree than ever before, new homes will feature energy-saving construction, and consumers will show an increased willingness to pay for these added features.

"Moratoriums on new connections to natural gas lines and concern over the availability of home-heating oil will cause more and more builders to install electric heating systems."

Such a trend already has begun, Kerin noted. "A joint report published by the Bureau of the Census and Department of Housing and Urban Development showed that the proportion of new homes and electric heat increased from 36 per cent in 1972 to 42 per cent in 1973, with a corresponding decline in the percentage of new homes using natural gas as fuel," he explained.

He also noted that the growing shortage of fossil fuels will increase the number of experiments with alternative sources of fuel, such as solar energy.

Realty firm honors two top earners

They are Natalie Benjamin of North Arcadia and Tom Joyce of Altadena.

Herbert Hawkins, firm president, also presented a special plaque to Jim Palmisano of Arcadia as top listor for the quarter.

Mrs. Benjamin was licensed to sell real estate one year ago. After completing the company's sales training program, she joined the North Arcadia staff.

She was named a member of the "Million $" sales club last December and has now earned more than $18,000 for the first three months this year.

Joyce, manager of the Altadena office, was top producer in both 1973 and 1974, is a member of the "Million $" sales club, and holds the title of "Salesmaster."

Palmisano wrote 32 listings during the first three months. He is also a "Salesmaster," member of the "Million $" sales club and was the company's top producer in 1969.

Jim Papararo, sales manager, reported sales volume for the first three months was in excess of $44 million, an 11 per cent gain over 1974.

NEW HOMES ON THE RISE

New homes, especially in the Chino and Upland areas, are being constructed to meet the demand of incoming families to the area. Within the past six months, Chino has added nearly 3,000 more residents to its 41,000 population. Pictured above is the building of a new home in Chino by the Marlboro Construction Co. Construction is taking place in the area of Pipeline and Walnut Avenues.

Home sales up in 1975

Business has been good in the Pomona Valley the first four months of this year according to Walter C. Arnold, president of the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors.

The dollar volume of sales through the Multiple Listing Service has exceeded that of 1974 for the same period by well over three million dollars and 40 more sales of property.

Fewer homes are being offered for sale and 80 less properties were listed for sale than in 1974.

At the same time prices appear to be increasing. In April, 1974, the average price of a home sold was $27,000 compared to $31,000 in April, 1975.

Faye Gage, executive director of the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors, released the following figures as to the amount of homes sold in the first several months of 1975 as compared to those sold in 1974. These figures are for homes sold through the multiple listing services that belong to the board.

In January of 1975, 127 homes were sold with sales amounting to $4 million, compared to 97 homes in January of 1974 amounting to a little over $2,300,000.

In February of 1975, 126 houses were sold amounting to $4 million in sales. In February of 1974, 131 houses were sold with sales amounting to $3,700,000.

City to install 1,000 street lights in '76

"Next year the City of Pomona will be adding 1,000 street lights at intersections throughout the city to better illuminate streets," said Pomona Mayor Ray Lepire.

The street lights are part of the general plan for the City and $72,000 of grant money from HUD has been allocated for their purchase and installment.

According to the Profiles, the comprehensive general plan for the City, street improvements are of major concern.

Profile reports that "the city has an on-going program of street improvements. Funding for most of these improvements, such as curbs, gutters, pavements, traffic signals, intersection lighting and some storm drains comes from the state gas tax refund. In conformance with state legislation, the city has designated a "Select System of Streets" which covers 210 miles out of the total 325 miles of city-owned streets and highways. Improvements on this system are funded by gas tax monies.

In addition to these general improvements, the city has undertaken a number of special improvement programs. One major area concerned the construction of underpasses on Garey, Towne, and White Avenues at the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific Railroad crossings. By providing grade separation between railroad and vehicular traffic, these projects greatly facilitated the traffic flow to the central business district. Funding for the construction of the Towne and White Avenue underpasses came primarily from special bond issues, while the State Division of Highways provided the bulk of funding for the Garey Avenue underpass since at that time it was still a part of the state highway system. The railroad companies also contributed 10 per cent towards the construction of the underpasses. The city has provided attractive landscaning of the underpass embankments and median strips so that the projects have not only greatly improved traffic flow but have also proved to be visually pleasing."

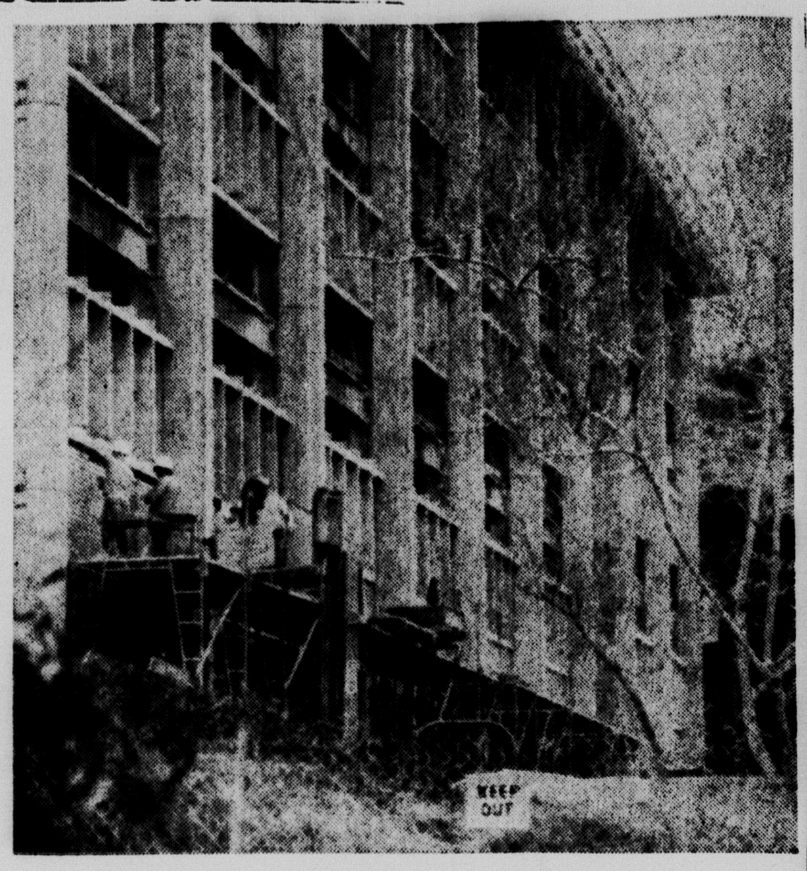
Sciences at Cal Poly get new bldg.

Construction is 52 per cent complete on Cal Poly's long needed $8.5 million science building—a building that was in the development, planning and approval stages for 10 years.

The science building, planned to open in 1976, is critical to the entire university academic program because it is the controlling factor in Cal Poly's ability to expand its science offerings. The university's school of science provides undergraduate and graduate courses for its own majors in biology, botany, chemistry, earth sciences, computer science, mathematics, microbiology, physics and zoology and for students in the six other areas of endeaver: agriculture, arts, business administration, engineering, environmental design, science and the teacher preparation center.

In addition to needed classroom and instructional space the new building will provide expanded space for the university computer center which serves the entire campus. The building's overall size of 125,000 gross square feet will house 76,500 square feet for laboratories, classrooms and offices; it will provide space for storage rooms, animal colonies, greenhouses, workrooms, and shops for the maintenance of equipment.



SCIENCE BUILDING

Construction workers, above, are shown laying bricks into place during the construction of Cal Poly Pomona's new science building. The building is scheduled for completion by 1976 and will cost $8.5 million.

Pomona, a city blessed with fine old residences

By WALT ARNOLD, President
Pomona Valley Board of Realtors

Have you looked at your city lately? Take the time, and I think you will be pleasantly surprised.

Pomona is blessed with many fine older residences dating from the Victorian period so much in demand today. Look at the detail work on some of these homes. Drive in any direction and you will see people at work, painting and repairing, or working in the yard. A real pride of ownership prevails.

And yes, the boards are coming off those boarded-up houses! People are buying them at bargain prices and making them beautiful again. In a sense Pomona is fortunate in having a good supply of homes to meet the demands of today's younger generation. Because of this supply the city is experiencing an influx of buyers from surrounding areas, some from as far away as Orange County.

Take a look also at some of the fine old commercial structures. Notice the architecture — the Masonic Temple with its fluted columns and the magnificent First Baptist Church, both dating from the turn of the century; the old Chamber of Commerce building at Third and Garey, the quaint brick building housing the City Yards, and the former Medical Dental Building at Main and Pasadena Streets with its face recently sandblasted and new again in all its glory.

For the contemporary minded, don't forget the beautiful Civic Center, in my opinion second to none.

Yes, Pomona has turned the corner; she is ready to face her next hundred years. But don't take my word for it. Some lazy Sunday afternoon, when you have nothing to do, take a drive around town yourself. Be surprised.

Four new industries to open

Four new plants in the City of Industry will be opening soon, creating about 100 jobs for Valley residents.

New businesses opening up will include the Iodent Chemical Co. at 20465 E. Walnut Avenue. The plant will manufacture chemicals through a process of blending liquids and chemicals. They will need approximately 50 employees.

Sportsmans' Products International Ink will open at 20946 Currier Road. This firm will make metal parts that relate to sporting goods.

C. Charles — P. Porta — Rench, a welding and cutting firm that also manufactures portable horse corrals, will be located at 20924 Currier Road.

Dealers optimistic

Local auto sales rise

Car sales are up and dealers in the Valley are optimistic about the future.

Jim Turner, general manager of Fair City Ford in Pomona, attributes the increase in sales to the "decline in inflation and the fact that people are again realizing that they need automobiles."

"Things are getting good again," said Turner. "Consumer traffic has increased over the last few months and people seem to have adequate money for down payments. In addition people's credit ratings are better — they seem to have straightened out their credit problems."

Turner admits that the rebates Ford Corp. was giving to the consumer in February helped boost sales. "Rebates had a good effect," he said, "in fact we had an oversell during that time."

To Tom Collett, truck and sales manager at Mel Bunnell Chevrolet in Pomona, not only are car and truck sales up but the attitude of the consumer has changed.

"Persons attitudes are so much better," Collett said. "They seem so much happier."

Collett added that Chevrolet is no longer giving rebates but sales are still up.

"I think sales are up," he said, "because Chevrolet started selling vehicles to agencies by the package in order to lower the price of the vehicle to the dealer. For example if you buy a Scottsdale pickup, you can get a package deal that will include carpeting, chrome grill, a tachometer, and much more. Chevrolet has discounted the retail price of the package by $105 and this discount has been passed on to the consumer."

"In addition, in order to give a discount to the consmer Chevrolet has started taking things off car models loaded with extras." In this way a customer who does not want chrome grill or mag wheels does not have to have them put on the car.

Pomona Valley Datsun attributes their increase in sales during the past few months to the effectiveness of local and national advertising.

According to the general manager, "advertising and the fact that the Datsun B-210 gets 39 miles per gallon have contributed to the tremendous showing of new faces." As a result car sales are better than in previous months.

Person Brothers in Ontario, dealers for the American Motors Corp., stated that their sales are on the "up" too. Person Brothers attributes their increase in sales to American Motors introduction of the Pacer, a small, compact and roomy car. According to the sales manager at Person Brothers, the Pacer accounts for 40 per cent of their total sales.

Used car values up

Used car values have increased steadily since Jan. 1 and are expected to continue rising until June 1.

At least that's the opinion of Bob Kelley and he ought to know.

Kelley is co-publisher of the Kelley Blue Book, which has been a major reference for used cars values since 1926.

"We're even expecting a shortage of good used cars," Kelley said.

Although there is considerable room for improvement in the new car business, Kelley said now is the best time a person could pick to shop for an automobile.

The higher values used cars are bringing, combined with factory rebates, makes it a buyers' market.

Waiting might be a mistake.

"I don't see how the deals could be any better," Kelley said.

Kelley said two major consumer worries are the economy and the possibility of gasoline rationing. "It's uncertainty that's hurting the auto business the most," Kelley said.

"It's not that everyone is having financial problems. It's that they are worried they might have them in the future.

"Personally, I think the publicity about the recession is worse than the recession itself."

Kelley thinks if the auto market rebounds by this summer, the slump will not be considered any worse than the one that accompanied last years gasoline shortage.

If there is a trend toward any particular model of automobile, Kelley said it is toward the small luxury car.

"They seem to be what people will want in the future," Kelly said.

If a person bought that size car today, he could be pretty sure it would maintain its value for several years."

Nevertheless, the big luxury car market seems to be less seriously hit than some of the smaller models—according to Kelley.

"It's hard to make predictions," Kelley said. "Every time you try, you get in trouble."

But auto manufacturers increased production and the fears evaporated.

Kelley said gasoline rationing might decrease the popularity of the familiar eight-cylinder auto.

But again, it's hard to tell.

"Changing to a six-cyclinder car might be a false economy," Kelley said.

"Some small eight-cylinder cars get better gas mileage than some large six-cylinder autos."

A big question mark among dealers is what will happen at the end of the month. Will rebates continue?

"I don't see how factories can afford to continue giving them much longer," Kelley said.

"Rebates definitely have stimulated business. It's hard to tell what will happen if they are not extended.

"Our business is harder now than it used to be," Kelley said.

"We've had some surprises in the past couple of years. It's hard to predict what's going to happen."

Four economic factors help boost auto sales

LOS ANGELES — A General Motors executive says that four economic factors, working in the auto buyer's favor at this particular time, account for the current improvement in automobile sales in the west.

"There may never have been a better time to buy a car than right now, and more and more people are realizing this," according to C. Carlton Brechler, GM spokesman in the western region.

The first factor that places the customer in a favorable position is the oversupply of new cars. GM has advertised that it has "more than 250,000 new 1975 small cars to sell."

Secondly, the supply of used cars is relatively short. As a result, trade-in values are up considerably, particularly on recent model cars. For example, a year ago a two-year old Impala (1972 model) had a wholesale value of $2,150 in the west. Today a two-year-old Impala (1973 model) is valued at $2,550.

The third favorable factor is that 1975 model cars generally use less gasoline and require less maintenance.

Finally, several manufacturers are offering rebates on certain models delivered at this time.

PACER, NEW FROM AMC

The Pacer, unique in concept, is American Motors' all-new 1975 wide small car. The two-door Pacer has a 100-inch wheelbase with an overall length of 171.5 inches, making it easy to park and handle.

AMC markets Pacer, a wide small car

DETROIT — In a sharp break with traditional car design, American Motors has introduced the Pacer, a wide small car unique in concept and designed to appeal to a broad range of car buyers.

Roy D. Chapin, Jr., AMC board chairman, told a North American news preview here that the Pacer, "illustrates again that American Motors is committed to providing distinctive ideas and products which are responsive to rapidly-changing times.

"In 1971, the company pioneered an all-inclusive car warranty designed to protect consumers, the Buyer Protection Plan. A year earlier, in 1970, the company made a product commitment to consumers with the Gremlin, the first U.S.-built subcompact car. By introducing the Pacer, the company now reaffirms its commitment to being responsive to the everchanging product needs of consumers."

Pacer development began four years ago with studies on personal mobility that could be anticipated in the late 1970's and early 1980's. The obective was "to meld together the specific ingredients of a car that would be in harmony with the environment of the coming decade," Chapin said.

"Several attempts were made to design such a car, and then one emerged that seemd to fit the obective," he said. "Subsequently, it was taken before panels of car buyers of widely varying purchase preferences — small car buyers, medium sized buyers, big car buyers — and they were asked for their opinions. They responded and we reacted to their suggestions."

Chapin said the Pacer is unlike anything American Motors has introduced in the past, and in many respects, it departs from anything ever offered by other automobile manufacturers.

"In a true sense, it is not revolutionary, but its total effect is one of marked difference," he said. "The exterior is not traditional in its configuration and its interior has the people space of much larger cars."

The two-door Pacer, with a 100-inch wheelbase, is offered in three versions—a standard model, a sporty "X" and a luxury DL model. It has an overall length of 171.5 inches, making it easier to park and manuever.

The four-passenger car has two large asymmetrical doors. The curb-side door is four inches longer than the driver's door for easy entry and exit of rear seat passengers. Both doors are cut into the roof to further facilitate entering and exiting.

A large rear hatch housing the rear window provides easy access to the luggage area behind the rear seat. The back seat can be folded forward for added cargo carrying capacity.

With interior design paramount during its development, the Pacer provides more inside room than any other American small car. Passenger comfort is enhanced by big seats plus exceptional head, shoulder, hip and leg room.

The instrument panel is easy to read and all controls are conveniently located in front of the driver. Other interior trim items and appointments are integrated with contemporary fabrics and colors to enhance the feeling of quiet spaciousness.

Powered by an economical, low-profile six-cylinder engine, the Pacer can be fitted with an optional overdrive for even greater fuel economy. The standard powerplant is a 232 cubic inch six, with a 258 cubic inch six available as an option.

A 22-gallon fuel tank gives the Pacer a range of more than 500 miles under highway driving conditions. In addition, its aerodynamic shape results in a 23 per cent decrease in air resistance, thus providing better fuel economy at highway speeds.

Excellent handling and ride characteristic are made possible by a front tread wider than many larger cars, giving the car a road-hugging quality. This, together with rack and pinion steering, substantially improves driver control.

The Pacer offers a full range of performance, convenience and appearance options, including front manual and power-operated disc brakes, steel belted radial tires, side door vent windows, rear window defogger, rear window washer and widesweep wiper and many others.

The Pacer, like all American Motors passenger cars, is covered by the company's Buyer Protection Plan which provides free correction of any factory defect in material or workmanship for 12 months or 12,000 miles.

Fire damages house

Pomona fire officials estimated $300 damage from a fire in a house at 12:42 a.m. at 1235 W. Second St. The fire started in a bedroom fireplace.

For good reason,
America has re-discovered the 6-cylinder engine.
Introducing the new 280S... possibly your best reason to discover Mercedes-Benz.

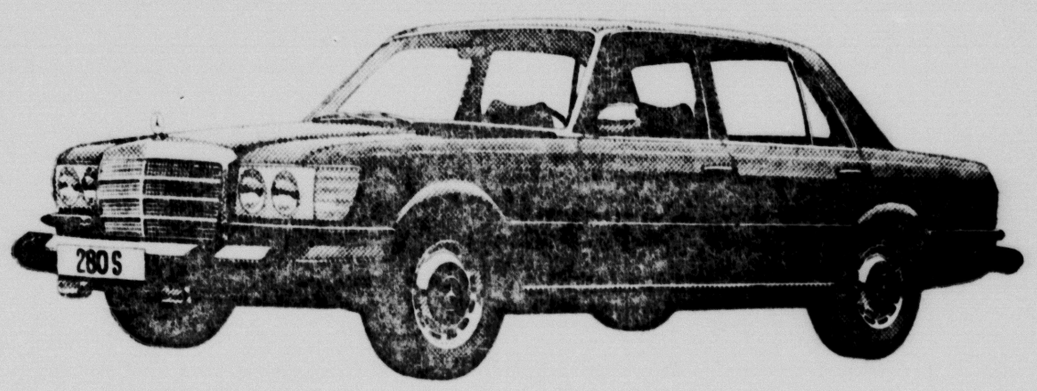
Now there's a subtle new dimension in 6-cylinder efficiency and economy. It's the new 280S Sedan from Mercedes-Benz. In every detail but the power train, this new 280S is the direct descendant of the now classic 450SE Sedans.

A total safety commitment

Come in and take a close look at a new 280S. You'll see that the total Mercedes-Benz commitment to safety is everywhere. You'll see that it is every inch a Mercedes-Benz.

Arrange a test drive with us. Feel the control of the 280S' 4-wheel independent suspension — no domestic sedan has it. Know the security of its dual circuit, 4-wheel disc braking system — a full 451 square inches of stopping area.

The new 280S is in our showroom now. When you discover all that it offers, you may well decide that this is the Mercedes-Benz you've been waiting for.



Engineered like no other car in the world.

This has been our policy for the past Seven Years, and we want you to think of us as the "Good Guys" at Pomona Dodge, and we are succeeding.

President

Here's why buying a new car now can save you money.

It's a buyer's market. If you need a new car, there are very good reasons why there will never be a better time to buy.

- Dealer inventories on new cars have never been higher. Your position to "deal" has never been stronger.
- Used car values have never been higher. A better trade-in can even offset the cost of a new car.
- Inflation is slowing down but will still add dollars to the price of future cars.
- Gas mileage on 1975 models is improved an average of 13.5% over 1974 models.
- Maintenance schedules on 1975 models require less frequent routine service, and can save you hundreds of dollars.
- The 1975 models are the safest, most pollution-free and most economically efficient cars ever built.

JOB FINDERS!

they found it in the Want Ads

The worst thing about being out of a job, aside from the obvious economic setbacks, is not knowing where to look.

Both of these dilemmas are resolved completely in one place -- the Classified Section of your newspaper. Job hunters have stopped wearing out their shoes long ago and turned to the Help Wanted Ads in the Classified pages. Here they can find a variety of job opportunities in a market that can change from day to day. Sooner or later they are likely to find the position for which they are qualified. Or they can list their qualifications, experience and salary needs in the Jobs Wanted classification.

Employers have come to depend heavily on the wide readership of Help Wanted ads. They find it an inexpensive method of describing exactly the type of worker needed. They are also able to give pertinent details about salary, pensions and other benefits.

Nothing brings employer and employee together more quickly and more effortlessly than the Help Wanted Ads. It's the best friend a job hunter ever had.

To find or fill a job it's the WANT ADS.... Look into it...

'NATURE ADVENTURE'

"One Day at Teton Marsh," nature segment of The Wonderful World of Disney, on NBC, Sunday at 7:30PM, features a return to the True-Life Adventure format and content reminiscent of such Disney classics as "Bear Country" and "Beaver Valley." Animals are observed in their natural surroundings without being fitted to a particular storyline. The story, in fact, is a single day in the life of the animals in the Teton Marsh.

The Teton Marsh is a small stretch of picturesque water-rich land in the Grand Teton National Park in Jackson Hole, Wyoming, at the southern tip of Yellowstone. In contrast to the geysers, bubbling pools and waterfalls of Yellowstone, the Grand Teton region is of mountainous splendor, with glaciated valleys of enchanting beauty and sparkling streams and lakes.

One of these streams with a beaver dam serves as a lookout point from which the different animals are observed in the Disney show. The viewpoint is one of the curious observer seeking out facts about the way of life of otters, beavers, ospreys, moose, wolverine, and other inhabitants of the area.

Everything is played against the background of the Grand Teton Mountain Range which towers 7,000 feet above the valley floor and remains snow-capped the entire year. The range itself, several thousand years old, suggests that "One Day at Teton Marsh" in the life of the majestic mountains which surround it, is much longer than the calendar 24 hours with which we mark time. The final curtain, as we might well have known all along, indicates the eternal timelessness of Nature.

CBS REPORTS: 'THE IQ MYTH'

CBS REPORTS: "The IQ Myth," an explanation of the ways in which the IQ concept and tests have been used, misused and abused through the years, airs Tuesday at 8:30PM on CBS with News Correspondent Dan Rather as the anchorman. An IQ score, usually assigned to an individual at an early age, has become synonomous with a person's worth, the broadcast points out. For several generations of Americans, it has often been the difference between entree into a good college and a high-paying career, or being confined to a trade. On the basis of an IQ score, children have been labeled, and sometimes mislabeled, as mentally retarded.

CBS REPORTS: "The IQ Myth" examines this powerful influence of an IQ score on a person's life—a power not widely recognized. Most people, in fact, have little knowledge of what the number actually represents. Many of the common misunderstandings often associated with the score are discussed on the broadcast. Among them: your IQ is something you're born with—(it isn't); it is constant and unchanging—(it isn't); it tests your overall mental ability—(it doesn't).

At least 100 different versions of IQ tests are on the market today. Millions are sold each year to schools around the country; strict procedures guard their distribution and handling. The broadcast takes a close look at these tests—what's in them, what's behind them, and what's wrong with them. It also examines how they came to be used and why, and explores the many areas in which they are used and misused in shaping people's lives.

In addition to presenting several leading educators and psychologists discussing the application and interpretation of the tests, the broadcast also focuses upon actual individual case histories in an effort to see how some IQ scores compared with eventual achievements.

Peter Poor is producer of CBS REPORTS: "The IQ Myth," and John Sharnix is executive producer.

First graders in Pawtucket, R.I., may not be quite sure what to think of school yet, but they certainly don't fully understand the implications of the I.Q. test they are given.

BROADWAY'S BIG NIGHT

Carol Lawrence, Michele Lee and Bernadette Peters (pictured) plus Charles Nelson Reilly, Larry Blyden, Larry Kert and Bobby Van are the stage and screen luminaries who make up the troop of performers on the 29th Annual Tony Awards ceremonies which air live on ABC, Sunday from 8:30 to 10:30PM, from the Winter Garden Theatre in New York.

The theme of this year's ceremonies is the glittering history of the Winter Garden, the most famous musical theatre in America. The Special will span the theatre's 64-year history, recalling its long parade of revues and musical comedies and their legendary stars. Opened in 1911 by Lee and J.J. Shubert, the Winter Garden has become the alma mater of the biggest names in the theatre, motion picture, television and radio worlds.

COVER CLOSE-UP

'DISPARATE DUO'

"I don't believe in absolutes."
"I do—money. That's one absolute I absolutely believe in."

Will Chandler and Sonny Pruitt are "gypsy" truckers, but that's about all they have in common. Will, a college graduate, is part cynic and part idealist and doesn't believe in absolutes. He belongs to the younger generation searching for a meaningful way of life, avoiding the established criteria of living, and seeking a common ground for mankind. Sonny, a graduate of the school of hard knocks, is a man of action and few words, and believes only in one way—his. He's been around, has seen it all and owes no man. Without apologies, he's his own boss, carrying "anything, anywhere, anytime anyone pays."

Claude Akins and Frank Converse star as Sonny and Will, two unlikely partners who use the open road as their proving ground each Thursday at 10PM on NBC. Akins who has portrayed a heavy through most of his show business career welcomes this chance to portray the "good guy" for a change, though as he says "it's much easier to be bad than good." "Try smiling for a photograph and you'll get an idea how hard it is to act the good guy," suggested Akins. "Then try sneering. It's almost impossible to sneer badly."

Born in Nelson, Ga., and reared in Bedford, Ind., Akins has been acting since his debut in a church play at the age of five. With acting as his goal, he majored in speech at Northwestern University. Following graduation, and his marriage to Therese "Pie" Fairfield, he went to work for a Bedford limestone company as a salesman. The president of the company was a theatre fan and got Akins into the Barter Theatre in Abington, Va. Then he was New York bound where he won a role in "The Rose Tattoo."

After several seasons with touring companies, Akins landed a movie role in "From Here to Eternity," and has since appeared in such films as "The Caine Mutiny," "Skyjacked," "Flap," "Devil's Brigade," "Inherit the Wind," "The Great Bank Robbery," and "The Timber Jacks." Akins has also appeared in about 150 television shows. Movin' On is Akins' first series starring role though he says he has probably made more TV pilots than any other Hollywood actor. A golf addict, Claude is a member of the Hollywood Hackers, and shares his enthusiasm with his teenage son, Claude Jr., who aspires to become a professional golfer.

Converse is a native of St. Louis, Mo., who received his early training on the stage in New York City. He still heads for the stage whenever he is away from a film or television camera, appearing in Bertolt Brecht's "Arturo Ui," in New Haven, Conn., prior to production start on Movin' On. Active in repertory theatre, he has performed in such plays as "The Seagull," "Death of a Salesman," "Night of the Iguana" and "A Man for All Seasons." In New York, he originated the role of Billy Einhorn in "The House of Blue Leaves," and appeared in "First One Asleep Whistle." In two seasons with the American Shakespeare Festival he was in "King Lear," "Richard III" and "Much Ado About Nothing."

His face is familiar to television viewers because of roles in such programs as Mod Squad, Medical Center and The Bold Ones, and he also starred in two series, N.Y.P.D. and Coronet Blue. Frank's motion picture credits include "The Rowdyman," "Shadow of a Gunman," "Hurry Sundown," "The Tattered Web" and "Dr. Cook's Garden." Reared in Bucks County, Pa., and educated at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., he earned his B.S.A. degree at Carnegie Tech, in Pittsburgh.

Not unlike his character, Will Chandler, Converse drove the cross-country trip from New York to California to see the "real" America with his wife and two children, Allan and Celia, before flying on to location in Astoria, Oregon. Both Akins and Converse were instructed how to jockey the huge diesels prior to filming by veteran stuntman and trucker Bobby Howell, who Akins remarked deserved a medal for not jumping out of the cab.

"Operating a big diesel is hard enough to concentrate on even when you know what you're doing," said Howell, "but I made it even harder on these stars. I had them rehearse lines while operating the rig in actual script conditions over rugged back roads." "There were a few times I swallowed mighty hard, but I'm really proud of these guys. I'd trust riding with them sooner than some friends I know who have been trucking for years."

'THE FLASHY TOY'

"New York's latest plaything, a very flashy toy, full of life and go and color and with no end of jingle to it."

That was the verdict one New York newspaperman passed 64 years ago on the flashy debut of a new Broadway theatre—the Winter Garden—opened by Messrs. Shubert on March 20, 1911. The opening production was a musical revue called "La Belle Paree, a Jumble of Jollity in Two Acts and Seven Scenes," and in the cast was a gifted young vaudevillian named Al Jolson.

The glittering history of the Winter Garden will be the theme of the 29th annual presentation of the American Theatre Wing's Antoinette Perry (Tony) Awards, which will be broadcast live from the theatre on ABC, Sunday at 8:30PM. Larry Blyden, Larry Kert, Carol Lawrence, Michele Lee, Bernadette Peters, Charles Nelson Reilly and Bobby Van are the performers who will recreate some of the famous songs, dances, and sketches first performed on the Winter Garden stage.

Jolson was only the first of scores of legendary performers who first caught the public fancy in the long parade of revues and musical comedies that made the Winter Garden the most famous musical theatre in America. Many of the presenters who will appear on the Tony Awards performed on the Winter Garden stage. They include Jack Albertson, Eve Arden, Fred Astaire, Milton Berle, Ray Bolger, Joan Crawford, Buddy Ebsen, Vincente Minnelli, Carl Reiner, Rosalind Russell, Joe Smith, Jean Stapleton, and Mae West.

Intended from the first as a mecca of musical entertainment, the Winter Garden quickly hit its stride with the "Passing Show of 1912," the first in a long series of Shubert-produced extravaganzas featuring popular songs, spectacular scenery, tall showgirls and low comedy. Marilyn Miller, Ed Wynn, James Barton, Marie Dressler and Willie and Eugene Howard were among the principal stars of the annual "Passing Shows," and such eventual legends as Joan Crawford first appeared in the chorus line.

But it was Jolson, who most closely identified with the theatre. After his Broadway bow in "La Belle Paree," he began to appear in special Sunday Night Shows at the Winter Garden, given for audiences of actors and actresses on their night off. He later went on to sing such unforgettable show-stopping tunes as "Rock-a-bye Your Baby With a Dixie Melody," "Avalon," "Mammy" and "Swanee" on the Winter Garden stage.

Lavish tunes dominated the Winter Garden for the first 17 years of its existence, until the advent of talking pictures.

Those Tough, Tough Questions You Asked About Hospital Costs

Quiz: How Much Stock Do We Put In the Unknown?

"At Home" Pullout: Great Budget Ideas For Houses, Gardens

TV's Lee Meriwether: "I'm Really Just A Tomboy at Heart"

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR VINCENT BUGLIOSI, prosecutor of the Manson case and coauthor of "Helter Skelter: The True Story of the Manson Murders"

Does America's fascination with the Manson case tell you anything about us as a people? — L. J., Racine, Wis.

● Yes. We are a nation consumed by violence and brutality. During the course of my investigation I had people running into my office asking to see the pictures of the maimed bodies. There's no accounting for taste. The Manson case offers quite an indictment against the prison system, since he is obviously a sick man and yet he was released from prison in 1967 after spending some 17 years behind bars with marginal psychiatric attention. By the way—one unique aspect of this case is that aside from crimes of passion, this is one of the few cases where women were responsible for murder.

FOR SEN. WILLIAM PROXMIRE (D-Wis.)

● Military foreign aid has to take the royal booby prize. We not only waste about $6 billion a year in this miserable business, we also waste precious resources of steel, oil, chemicals and skilled manpower. Most important, we waste the lives of the tragic victims of those many wars in which the U.S. taxpayer has armed both sides (India vs. Pakistan; Greece vs. Turkey; El Salvador vs. Nicaragua; etc.).

FOR NATALIE COLE, Nat King Cole's daughter

When were you first aware that you had a famous father? —R. G., Beckley, W.Va.

● When my parents gave a party and the guests included Debbie Reynolds, Billy Eckstine, Pearl Bailey, Duke Ellington and hosts of others. I wondered why such important people would be visiting us. Then when I saw Harry Belafonte (my idol) swimming in our pool, I got to thinking, "Well, if my mom and dad know such famous people, then I guess they must be famous too."

FOR REDD FOXX

How did you become a comedian? If you had your life to live over, would you follow the same career?—U. Macanus, French Camp, Calif.

● I became a somewhat successful comedian by starving a lot and having nothing to lose by making one more stab at it—over and over again. If I had to do it again, I'd get a regular job and be the funniest guy on the job and eat every day.

FOR BARRY NEWMAN, star of "Petrocelli"

As a "swinging" bachelor, are you for or against Women's Lib?—M. P., Grand Forks, N.D.

● I'm its staunch supporter. I can't bear women who leave the house only for coffee klatches, Mah-Jongg and shopping and, when they're home, either furiously wave a dust mop around or else clatter away in the kitchen. I'm all for career women. I'll go one step further: I'm not put off by a woman who takes the initiative and calls a man. Being aggressive doesn't detract from a woman's femininity.

FOR MARY BACON, jockey

What's the most competitive situation you've ever been in? —S. W., New Brunswick, N.J.

● Johnnie Bacon (my ex-husband) and I once finished neck and neck in a race. We watched the tote board for results, glaring at each other. When "dead heat" flashed on the screen, someone yelled, "You're both winners!" When we heard that, our sense of humor came to the fore. We walked out of the winners circle arm in arm, and Johnnie bought me a box of candy on the way home.

FOR ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Do you give advice to your family?—S. P., Medford, Ore.

● Other than the normal, everyday "helpful hints" that every wife and mother does, I don't think I do. But 25 years ago, as an anniversary gift, I gave my husband a locket in the shape of a money clip, on which is engraved "Money Isn't Everything." Inside are miniatures of our son, daughter and me. The man who designed the locket asked if I wanted to copyright the idea. I declined. Love cannot be copyrighted! (Martin and I have been married 35 years.)

FOR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

I have heard that you were one of the contestants cleared after the quiz-show scandals broke. How did the investigators manage to decide that you were for real?—Mrs. D. A., Braintree, Mass.

● Different people on the district attorney's staff took boxing encyclopedias and threw questions at me from all angles. When they couldn't stump me, they were convinced I hadn't been fed phony questions. NBC also conducted a private investigation that proved I knew nothing about the scandals.

FOR MICHAEL LEARNED, mother on "The Waltons"

Why does "Miss" precede your name on the list of stars on the show? Is this a slap at Women's Lib?—J. E. Hester, Hurdle Mills, N.C.

● "Miss" preceding one's maiden name is a tradition in the theater. Because I have a boy's name, our producers felt it was necessary to show that Michael Learned was indeed the lady on the screen and not a mistake. I am all for Women's Lib, but don't particularly feel that Ms, Miss or Mrs. has anything to do with the important issues.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

Have there been any famous Tony Awards "losers"?—D. P., Boise, Idaho

● How about Brando? In 1948, he rocketed to stardom as Stanley Kowalski in "Streetcar Named Desire." Although he launched a new trend in acting, he lost the Tony. Three actors tied for first place—Basil Rathbone for "The Heiress"; Paul Kelly for "Command Decision"; Henry Fonda for "Mister Roberts." Brando hasn't acted on Broadway since. In 1949, Lee J. Cobb seemed a sure winner for Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman" but Rex Harrison won for "Anne of a Thousand Days." Nor did Ethel Merman win in 1960 for "Gypsy"—Mary Martin won for "The Sound of Music." In 1970, Danny Kaye was starring in Richard Rodgers' musical "Two by Two." Not only did he not win—he wasn't even nominated (Hal Linden won for "The Rothschilds").

Questions You Raised About Hospital Costs:

We Kept Digging: Here's What We Found

Ewing Galloway

"In 1972, over 30 percent of the 777 hospitals equipped to do open-heart surgery didn't perform one operation! Eighty-seven percent did fewer than one operation per week. . . .This means that $30 to $40 million worth of facilities went unused that year."

By John Kelly

Last September, FAMILY WEEKLY ran an investigative report titled "Our $125-a-Day Hospitals: Where Does All the Money Go?" It wasn't too surprising that readers' reactions were both immediate and sharp. While a lot of the mail was complimentary, there were a number of critical letters as well. Because of the tremendous importance of this subject, we've decided to take a second look. Here are some of the more telling points the critics of our previous report made—and what our further investigations revealed:

POINT: "You placed too much blame on wage-and-salary increases of hospital employees and not enough on other costs. These have risen even more steeply in recent years."

OUR FINDINGS: True, the costs of items like drugs, food, beds and other materials have jumped sharply—even more sharply in fact than hospital payroll expenses. Between 1962 and 1972, salary costs increased 236 percent, from $13.12 per patient day to $44.17. But other expenses rose a staggering 346 percent, from $6.49 per patient day to $29.72.

Sheer inefficiency has accounted for a big portion of this increase. Dr. Dean S. Ammer, a professor of business administration at Northeastern University in Boston, Mass., estimates that American hospitals could "save $1 billion annually if they implemented competent inventory and purchasing controls." For example, the average hospital keeps $630 worth of supplies in inventory to supply each of its beds. On the face of it, this may seem like money well spent. But institutions like St. Anthony's Hospital in Columbus, Ohio, manage to provide excellent patient care with only $50-per-bed inventories. The upshot is that such institutions not only have more cash on hand for other items, they also have fewer dollar losses due to spoilage, theft and misplacement of goods.

Purchasing practices also inflate hospital bills. Dr. Ammer feels that companies supplying hospitals too often are given carte blanche powers. "They not only tell the hospital purchasing agent what should be bought, but how much should be bought," he says.

Group purchasing may be one answer. The Chicago Hospital Council has shown how a well-run joint-purchasing program can help members cut costs. Before forming a co-op nine years ago, the hospitals in this group were paying about $14 for a bottle of 100 ampicillin tablets. Today, they pay $3.30 per 100. Similarly, group purchasing of intravenous solutions by the 85 member hospitals saved nearly $3 million in the past three years.

POINT: "How can you claim that the country has too many hospital beds, when states like Montana and Colorado have critical bed shortages?"

OUR FINDINGS: Again, there is a good deal of truth in this assertion. Several areas of the country are badly in need of more beds. But these places are the exception, as a new report by InterStudy, a Minneapolis research firm, demonstrates. InterStudy estimates that the U.S. has at least 60,000 surplus hospital beds at an annual cost of approximately $10,000 per bed to maintain. But what's worse is that the report found that hospitals are planning to spend an estimated $4.5 billion on new facilities next year, even though the number of admissions has been dropping steadily.

If this trend continues, many institutions may find themselves caught in a perilous financial crunch. "It's just possible that we may see a rash of technical bankruptcies, as falling admissions make it harder for hospitals to meet their bank-loan payments," says one expert. This is why the American Hospital Association (AHA) has called for a moratorium on the building of new beds unless their need can be demonstrated beyond any doubt.

POINT: "In many large cities with congested traffic conditions, it is essential that a certain number of hospitals have facilities like intensive-cardiac-care units, even though this may seem like duplication."

OUR FINDINGS: Duplication is uneconomic and leads to the practice of bad medicine. This may sound harsh, but the statistics compiled by Dr. Elton Rayack, a professor of economics at the University of Rhode Island, demonstrate what we mean. In 1972, over 30 percent of the 777 hospitals equipped to do open-heart surgery didn't perform one operation! Eighty-seven percent did fewer than one operation per week. Translated into dollars and cents, this means that $30 to $40 million worth of facilities went unused that year. But even more distressing, the death rate in the low-usage institutions was far higher than in the hospitals that performed the surgery frequently.

John C. Donaher, executive vice president of the Medical Center Corp., which represents six Detroit hospitals, thinks his organization has shown how banding together can save institutions sizable sums. "Each of our member hospitals either currently is or will specialize in a particular service. For example, one handles all pediatric patients, one is responsible for obstetrics and infectious diseases, another takes neurosurgery cases." The possibilities for savings are tremendous. And the opportunity for improving patient care is even greater. For unlike the underutilized high-mortality cardiac units cited by Dr. Rayack, each of the teams in these busy units has plenty of chance to practice its specialty.

POINT: Perhaps the most touching and unusual letter came from Carol Allison, a nurse at tiny 20-bed McLean Hospital in McLean, Texas. "Last year," she wrote, "we spent approximately $20,000 in order to keep our certification to treat Medicare patients. Now, we have just received a letter from the Medicare office in Baltimore informing us that our provider agreement has been terminated."

OUR FINDINGS: To the layman this may not sound catastrophic. But Medicare money is a major source of revenue for most hospitals. In fiscal 1974, for example, $7.8 billion in such funds flowed into the hospitals, and this year the figure is expected to rise to $9.7 billion. To lose Medicare certification is a major financial disaster.

What makes McLean's situation particularly tragic is that the large urban hospitals that can easily meet the program's treatment and facility standards have been able to turn Medicare into a money machine—primarily because Medicare has no effective cost-monitoring mechanism.

Thus, in the three years prior to Medicare's passage (1963-65) hospital costs increased at a judicious five to six percent annual pace. But in the three years after it went into effect, rates jumped an average of 15 to 20 percent each year.

Hopefully, this is going to stop. The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, which administers Medicare and Medicaid, has begun to add cost-review mechanisms to both programs. The AHA's tough new attitude toward hospital building and Blue Cross's recent decision to impose financial penalties on those hospitals that perform inefficiently also hold promise for the future. In short, it looks as though the brakes are finally going to be applied to hospital costs.

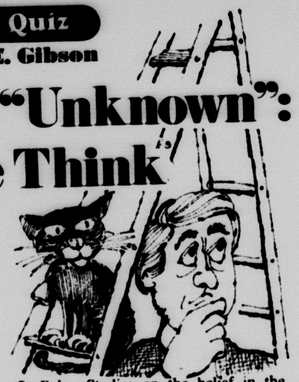
Belief in the "Unknown": How We Think



True or False: The superstition that has the strongest hold on people is that it is bad luck to walk under a ladder. (See number 2)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Most people believe that success or failure depends more on effort than on luck.

2. The superstition that has the strongest hold on people is that it is bad luck to walk under a ladder.

3. People of higher education and intelligence tend to take a dim view of such beliefs as ESP, clairvoyance, etc.

4. People today have less faith in God.

5. People's beliefs about their lucky number—or color—are strongly influenced by what psychologists term the "blue seven phenomenon."

6. Almost half of the people in the U.S. believe there are people—not too different from us—living on other planets.

ANSWERS

1. True—as shown by University of California studies of the attitudes and beliefs of hundreds of men and women from various social backgrounds. Most rated effort as the most important ingredient in determining success or failure. Luck was accorded the lowest rating.

2. True—according to the findings of a university study that surveyed a cross section of men and women. The belief in the efficacy of "knocking on wood" ranked a close second. Other high-ranking superstitions included "black cat crossing path" and "breaking a mirror." Surprisingly, the centuries-old belief that spilled salt is a forerunner of bad luck ranked close to the bottom of the list. It should be noted that the subjects' amount of education was not necessarily a factor in lessening superstitious beliefs. For example, the investigators cite the case of "a psychoanalyst with 23 years of formal education who indicated that 11 of the 24 listed superstitions had a partial influence on him." The investigators suggest that "particularly in current times, the sense of control inherent in superstitious belief and practice has a therapeutic value in reducing anxiety."

3. False. Studies on the belief in the supernatural, conducted by investigators at three leading universities, have shown that neither education nor a higher-than-average intelligence has a marked effect on belief in the supernatural. A further finding: Women as a whole were more favorably disposed toward such beliefs than men.

4. False. A team of University of Michigan sociologists showed that despite a significant decrease in church attendance over the last decade, the large majority of respondents—better than nine out of ten—said they believed in God. A decreasing number, however, said they believed in life after death. The investigators also reported that "There were no significant changes in the proportions of people who said they governed their everyday decisions by 'what God would want me to do.'"

5. True. Studies conducted at Florida State University showed that when people are questioned as to their favorite—or lucky—number, seven is the one most frequently indicated. The same interesting finding applies to the color blue. Investigations of the "blue seven phenomenon" have been made on hundreds of subjects at other universities with similar results. Just why this should be is hard to explain, but studies show that even children favor blue and seven.

6. True—according to a nationwide survey of men and women from various walks of life, which showed that 46 percent felt certain that other planets were peopled by creatures bearing some resemblance to us. Thirty-eight percent didn't believe there was much of anything up there but sky and stars, and 16 percent couldn't make up their minds about the population of the planets. An interesting sidelight: The survey showed there were almost twice as many believers among the college educated as among those with only a grade-school education.

Inflation-Fighting Ideas for Indoors and Outdoors

Remember when eating in the kitchen was a way of life for many Americans? Maybe it's an idea worth reviving. Then you can convert your dining room into a more-often-used guest room or den.

As the price of food rises, enthusiasm for growing one's own rises too. If you plan to beat the high cost of food by raising vegetables, then a greenhouse can give you a head start on the growing season.

A backyard vegetable garden is hardly a new idea. During World War II, some 35 to 40 million people had Victory gardens that provided families with fresh fruits and vegetables during the harvest months and canned food for the rest of the year.

But if you've never had a garden, do some homework before you buy seed or decide what and how much to put in. You can get valuable information from your local agricultural extension service, from library books on home gardening or from inexpensive booklets from the federal government: "Growing Vegetables in the Home Garden" (80¢) and "Minigardens for Vegetables" (30¢). Both are available from Consumer Information, Department 6, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

According to one gardening expert, people tend to make several mistakes when starting a home garden. They spend too much money getting equipped. And they buy too much seed. It's not necessary to spend more than $10 on seed at most.

If you don't have enough tillable land, you could help organize a community garden. A nonprofit organization called "Gardens for All," P.O. Box 2302,

Country Kitchen, Circa 1975

To create this modern country-kitchen setting, we started with bright-colored wall paint, then put down a GAF cushioned sheet-vinyl flooring pattern that has an uncanny resemblance to hand-painted Delft tile. (It's the foam-backed, "no-wax" kind.) Then—a new use for the leftover flooring: as the bright backsplash and lambrequin around the sink window, simply applied with floor-bond adhesive.

An attractive decorator touch was carried out with Kirsch shelving for storage of Copco cookware, baskets of flowers and Block china. Trestle table by Ethan Allen. Major appliances by General Electric. Room designed by Abbey Darer.

A Greenhouse Farm

This economical, energy-saving greenhouse is constructed of double-walled clear acrylic plastic reinforced with shatterproof fiber glass. The translucent panels are permanently bonded to a supporting aluminum frame. Because of the thermal walls, only minimal heating with no special wiring is required in colder climates. The greenhouse comes in a kit with easy-to-assemble directions and does not need a special foundation. Approximate cost for freestanding model (8 x8), about $700; a lean-to model (5½ x8), about $500.

This is one greenhouse that doesn't keep you in a perpetual stooping position. It's over seven feet high, with six-foot eaves.

Norwalk, Conn. 06852, makes information available on how to organize and operate a successful community-garden project. You can write for their $1 booklet "Beginners Guide to Growing a Lot of Vegetables." Hundreds of community-garden groups have been organized—using municipal parks, vacant lots, church property or industrial land. A community garden begun in 1971 on land donated by the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor now involves more than 2,000 families in that city.

Growing Under Glass. The advantage of a greenhouse is that it allows you to garden all year long. Greenhouses come in an amazing variety of sizes, shapes and materials, many in assemble-it-yourself form, others requiring professional construction.

A lean-to greenhouse is perfect for limited spaces. For more greenhouse information write to The Vegetable Factory, 100 Court Street, Copiague, N.Y. 11726.

Framing materials are usually aluminum or redwood, each with its advocates. Panes are usually glass, fiber glass or a choice of plastic film. Glass is traditional, but it is expensive and can break. Fiber glass is strong, even hailproof, and comes in large lightweight sheets. In order to operate a greenhouse effectively, the main accessory needed is a heater and a simple ventilation system to get rid of hot air, or your vegetables will virtually "cook."

The space and location you have available for a greenhouse determine the size and style you choose. Should it be a freestanding or a lean-to model? For balance of light, a freestanding one ought to be on a north-south axis. As long as your greenhouse isn't glass, you can put it under tall trees that lose their leaves in winter. A lean-to ought to have a southern exposure in order to get the most winter sun, with the vents toward prevailing winds.

The easily assembled greenhouse shown, called the "Vegetable Factory," can produce 650 pounds of vegetables annually, based on an independent laboratory report, at an average cost of 19¢ a pound including all operating costs. A lean-to model can produce tomatoes at a cost of only 6¢ a pound!

Savings are paramount in the battle against high food costs, but whether you produce a bumper crop or just enough for your family's needs, gardening at home will provide the reward and delight of "growing your own thing."

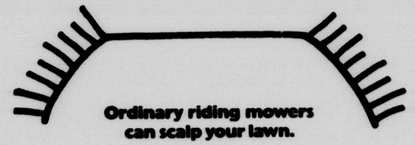
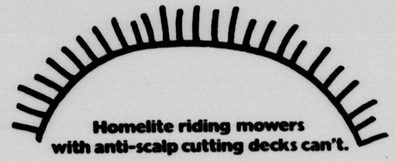
Did you know that cutting grass with a Homelite riding mower can actually prevent baldness?





If the earth were perfectly flat, any riding mower would be perfectly fine. Unfortunately, lawns have their ups and downs. And that's where most riding mowers run into trouble.

Their mower decks are attached to the chassis, which gives them absolutely no give. When they run into a bump or incline, they level it. Leaving your lawn with a bald spot.

Homelite riding mowers are designed to prevent this. The mower deck is attached to the front suspension. As the wheels glide over a high spot, the deck glides over it too. Leaving your lawn manicured instead of scalped.

In addition, the cutting blades are reinforced with rigid steel to keep the ends from sagging. So your lawn always looks even instead of odd.

And not only are Homelite riding mowers easy on your lawn, they're easy on you too.

They have practically effortless steering. Full plush seats that are fully adjustable. And electric starting is standard on our deluxe 8 hp. model. (Optional on 5 hp.)

To ease your lot even further, optional accessories include: a 5-bushel grass catcher, 1000 lb. capacity dump cart and a lawn roller.

Should the need for service arise, we back up our dealers with more factory service branches than any other riding mower company. And that does away with long waits for parts or service which could cause your lawn to lose its looks.

Start Your Child Growing Plants

Nature walks, a trip to a botanical garden, even a visit to a commercial garden center—they're all good ways to start a youngster growing and caring for plants.

Almost every department or dime store today has a garden center. Let your child browse through it with you. It's a great opportunity for kids to learn about many of the most commonly grown houseplants. Or make a special trip to a big nursery or botanical garden, asking questions about the names and care of the plants that are the most appealing.

Start your child growing plants indoors. Select a spot where basic gardening tools are kept (a table near a windowsill, for example) so that when the desire to garden hits, it can be translated into action quickly.

Children can't go too wrong in caring for their plants if they follow some general rules:

- Don't overdo watering. Empty any excess from saucers.
- During blooming times, all-purpose plant food should be fed at three-week intervals, diluted to the proper concentration indicated on the label.
- Flowering plants need sunlight and do better in south windows; foliage plants will receive enough light, but not direct sun (which they don't need), in a north-window setting.
- Avoid drafts or overheating (from a too-near radiator).

Getting children in touch with nature will teach them patience, give them a sense of accomplishment, and may just start a lifetime avocation.

Books recommended on the subject: "Growing Up Green," by Alice Skelsey and Gloria Huckaby (Workman Publishing Co.), and "A Child's Garden" (available by sending 50¢ for postage and handling to: Chevron Chemical Co., Ortho Division, Dept. F.W., Box 3744, San Francisco, Calif. 94119).

What's the Home Gardener's Favorite Vegetable?

According to a recent Gallup survey, here are the most preferred vegetables grown by amateur home gardeners: Tomatoes are the overwhelming favorite, grown by 92 percent of all home gardeners. Runners-up are string beans (63 percent), onions (59 percent), cucumbers (58 percent), radishes (51 percent) and lettuce (50 percent). Least popular are Brussels sprouts (seven percent).

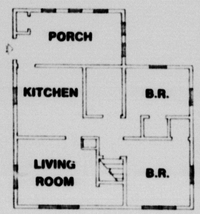
This Small House Had Big Problems

(Here's How We Solved Them)

When money is tight, imagination must take over. The owners of this house, a retired couple, live on a fixed income. Their children visit them and they love to entertain, so they've had to think through the function of every room, making each do double duty.



They turned a second bedroom into a study for the husband and put a sleep sofa in the porch room for their visiting family.

A single color scheme was used throughout to coordinate the rooms, designed by Elroy Edson. Neutrals—browns and beiges, primarily—were chosen so the rooms would look larger. By keeping to one family of colors, furniture can be brought from one room to another when company comes without giving a make-shift appearance.

The couple also changed the entrance to the house by closing off the front door. This gives much-needed wall space in the living room, formerly just a traffic lane. Now, everyone enters through the porch, which leads right into the kitchen.

Modern furniture and modern materials were chosen because they're usually easier to care for—Selig furniture, Herculon carpeting, Birge scrubbable wall coverings—an important consideration for this couple.

Punchy Wallpaper and "Mixable" Chairs

Since the kitchen leads directly into the living room, it was important for the two to blend. The chairs, for example, can be moved into the living room when company comes. The gay floral wallpaper and coordinate for the ceiling were chosen to counterpoint white cabinets and appliances.

Proof that a kitchen can make an attractive entrance.

Extra Bedroom Converts to Den

A radiator becomes decorative and functional when it forms a unit that serves as both a work surface and a file cabinet. The sectional turns a corner, but it could, in another space, be a conventional 90-inch sofa. Patterned wall covering adds visual excitement. Wall-to-wall carpeting was selected to enlarge the small space and give the room a feeling of luxury.

If a room is no longer needed for its intended purpose—you might turn it into "getaway" quarters.

The key to planning this room was the table, which had to be located near the pass-through.

Photographs by Darwin Davidson

Porch Room—Now Dual-Purpose—Creates More Space Inside

Just inside the entrance to the house, the porch room has been redone to function as a family room or bedroom for overnight guests. The wicker chair and coffee table are easily moved when the sleep sofa is opened, while the patterned carpet was chosen for its ability to hide tracked-in dirt. Wall covering and sofa are in the same soft sand color, designed to unify the room.

Tool Hang-up

A gardener's shelf-and-tool organizer from Rubbermaid holds supplies and separates garden tools in a minimum of space. Three long-handled yard tools hang from vinyl-covered retainer hooks and specially designed holds. A sturdy shelf holds small cans and boxes as well as hand tools. The easy-to-install unit retails for $2.29.

A unique moisture-monitoring meter tells you instantly whether you're killing your plants with kindness by overwatering or whether you're drying them out. It's a simple mechanism, consisting of a corrosion-resistant probe that's inserted deep into the soil. A tiny amount of electrical energy will be generated by the moisture, giving you a precise numerical reading. A detailed instruction booklet is included with a listing of the correct meter readings for each plant. Called Sav-a-Plant, its retail price is $15. Build a Window Greenhouse

If you can saw a piece of wood and use a staple gun, you should have no trouble constructing this window unit. Materials consist of ¾" exterior plywood, greenhouse plastic and ⅜" aluminum rod. The tools required are a staple gun, a saber saw and a hammer. The complete plans can be obtained by sending $1 to "Greenhouse," FAMILY WEEKLY, 641 Lexington Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022.

Batik a Gardener's Apron

Buy a conventional butcher's apron (available at uniform supply stores). Turn up the already finished hem about seven inches, then stitch vertically to create pockets. You add the design with a simplified adaptation of the ancient Indonesian art of batik. It works like this: Melt several candles in a double boiler. Using an artist's brush, draw your design on the apron with the melted candle wax. Dip the garment in your choice of dye color, dissolved in lukewarm tap water. Only the non-waxed areas will take the dye, while the waxed portions remain their original color. Wax is then easily removed by dry cleaning, revealing the pattern. For a free instruction sheet on this easy batik dye technique, write to: RIT, Dept. F.W., P.O. Box 307, Coventry, Conn. 06238.

Collector's Item

Whether you're a window-box tiller or gentleman farmer, you'll have use for this ingenious clock. It not only tells the correct time—but also the length of the growing season in an area, phases of the moon, time of the year, date of the first frost and date of the last frost. Its electric movement is housed in a hand-rubbed walnut case with an antique design. The Planter's Clock can be ordered by mail, at a cost of $45 plus $3.50 for postage. Star Chat

By Peer J. Oppenheimer

Beautiful Lee Meriwether: "Still Just a Tomboy at Heart"

Lee Meriwether, still beautiful 20 years after she became Miss America, and now Buddy Ebsen's assistant in "Barnaby Jones," was one hour late when she joined me for lunch in Los Angeles' plush Scandia restaurant. "Somebody stole the battery out of my car, so I had to borrow a VW from a friend," she explained.

FAMILY WEEKLY: You look and act so ladylike, yet I understand you were quite a tomboy when you were a girl. Is that true?

LEE: I used to be on the boys' basketball and football teams when I was 14. My friend Janet was on the football team too. She could run faster than all the boys.

FW: What kind of sports do you play today?

LEE: I don't play many sports, but I still have the reputation of being a tomboy. For instance, when my daughter's Scout troop does something girlish, they ask one of the other moms. When they go camping in the woods, I'm asked to put on hiking boots and hit the trail.

FW: In what other way were you a tomboy?

LEE: I was 15 when I wrote to J. Edgar Hoover and asked him to let me become a G-man.

FW: G-man?

LEE: Well—G-woman. He wrote back and said that at the time they weren't hiring any G-women, but when I grew up there were other opportunities to join the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Like doing secretarial work. [Grinning] A typical male-chauvinist attitude.

FW: Why did you want to become a G-woman in the first place?

LEE: Looking back at it, I think basically because I always wanted to be an actress. You see, I'd seen a lot of films in which women played secret agents. They were always hiding behind some assumed identity—scrubbing floors, waiting on tables, driving cabs. I saw myself acting out such roles.

FW: Did you ever meet Hoover?

LEE: Yes. About a year after I got married [to actor Frank Aletter], we went on a tour of Washington. A girl friend of mine who worked for the FBI showed us around and introduced us to J. Edgar Hoover. I told him I was the girl who had wanted to join the FBI as a teenager.

FW: What did he say?

LEE: He turned to Frank and said, "Your gain is our loss." Then he took us to a shooting gallery and let us try out some guns.

FW: How did you make out?

LEE: Not too well. I did much better last year when Buddy [Buddy Ebsen] and I were invited to graduation exercises at the Police Academy. They took us to the police range where I did really well. Maybe because I was less nervous than with Mr. Hoover.

FW: Who were your heroes when you were little?

LEE: I guess a lot of women become actresses because as kids they admired some pretty lady on the screen. My heroes were the cowboy stars. The movies I liked best were the ones with the most action and no girls. I still long to play in a Western where I get to ride a horse at breakneck speed and shoot a gun.

FW: You live in an area of Los Angeles that was hit heavily by the earthquake a few years ago. How did you make out?

LEE: Not too well. But it could have been worse. We lost a chimney, and when it fell down it hit a beam that ran through the living room. And the garage split open. I also lost a lot of crystal and china, and all of the walls of the house were cracked. Come to think of it, it was ghastly.

FW: How did you react when

YOU COULD BE ONE OF THE ESTIMATED 30 MILLION AMERICANS QUALIFIED, BUT NOT GETTING FOOD STAMPS

You don't have to be poor to receive Food Stamps

By Americans United

It was reported in the December 20th, front page of the Wall Street Journal that more and more working, middle, and upper income families are now receiving Food Stamps. This is the government program that reduces your food bill by up to 60% per month.

WHAT ARE FOOD STAMFS?

. Food Stamps are coupons that can be used just like money to buy groceries. You can buy more food because the stamps can be purchased for less than what they are worth in the store.

For instance, if you qualify, you might be able to get $118.00 worth of food stamps for $48.00 dollars. That would save you around $70.00 a month on your grocery bill, under the right conditions some people even get food stamps free.

One of the reasons the food stamp program was started was to help low income families buy more food. However, it was also meant to help the farmer sell more of his products. As a matter of fact, the program is being run by the Dept. of Agriculture and not the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare, as many people believe.

In July of 1974, the food stamp program rules were changed and expanded to cover millions of Americans that were not previously eligible.

YOU COULD BE ONE OF THEM

It's a fact, that of the estimated 43 million American families who qualify for food stamps, only 13 million families are now taking advantage of the program, and getting their share. The number of families is, however, growing daily, as more and more, realize they are entitled to this benefit.

FOR EXAMPLE!

So why are only 13 million Americans out of 43 million or more taking advantage of this benefit? And most important!

ARE YOU ONE WHO IS NOT RECEIVING YOUR SHARE?

THE FACT IS: Most people think they must be on welfare or unemployed to receive these benefits. This is definitely not true. So before you say no! I don't have a chance!

LOOK AT THESE STARTLING FACTS!

- It is possible to earn more than $10,000 dollars a year and still receive Food Stamps (even after taxes and deductions).
- Thousands of senior citizens are eligible.
- 30 million American families, or more, do not realize they qualify for the Food Stamp program.
- Once you qualify you use the stamps in the food market just like they were cash.
- In August alone the U.S. Government gave out 493 million dollars worth of stamps for only 200 million. (That's 295 million dollars worth of free groceries.) Did you get your share?
- Once you qualify, it takes only two weeks or less to start receiving your stamps.
- You definitely do not have to be unemployed or on welfare to qualify.
- If you are on strike, you can receive Food Stamps.
- You don't even have to be an American citizen to qualify.

After reading these facts, I think you'll agree that it really is incredible that millions of families that could be receiving this bonus on their family budget are in fact not receiving their fair share.

So, if you think that there is any chance that your family, friends, or relatives may have a chance to receive this bonus on their food budget,

YOU SHOULD FIND OUT AT ONCE!

To find out if you do, is very quick and easy. Americans United has just published a special, easy to read kit, containing complete qualifying rules and the official sample U.S. Dept. of Agriculture application forms.

WHY IS THERE A NEED?

You may ask, why is there a need for our kit, can't I get this information from the government?

The answer is of course, yes. You may, however, have to drive across town, or wait in line several hours, for your turn.

Then, you'll be handed something written by the Government that's hard to understand. Or you will be asked a lot of embarassing questions by a clerk who just might not know all the answers.

THE KIT

With our kit, however, right in the privacy of your own home, you can determine beforehand if you are qualified and what you have coming. Plus, our kit is written in a very easy to read style complete with forms, charts, and work sheets. We've done the work and research for you and made it as easy as possible to use. After reading our kit, we guarantee you will know your chances.

Many Americans believe that it is beneath their dignity to take advantage of food stamps. If you are one of them, consider this startling fact.

THE HIGHEST SINGLE RISE IN THE COST OF LIVING TODAY IS TAXES

Taxes—more than food, more than gasoline, more than anything. And who do you think paid those taxes? You know who. You did.

DON'T YOU THINK YOU SHOULD FIND OUT IF YOU QUALIFY?

To receive this special kit, just send $2.50 plus 50¢ for postage and handling along with your name and address printed on a slip of paper to: Americans United, 401 Market Ave., N., Canton, Ohio 44702.

If you have this benefit coming to you, we want you to know about it. And believe me, our hopes and intentions are that if you have this benefit coming, you should find out about it and use it.

Plus, if you are not satisfied or do not qualify, or for any reason, we will gladly refund the price of the kit to you.

LEE: In a rather peculiar way. When I woke up I thought a homicidal maniac was in the living room throwing everything on the floor. Then when the bed moved, I thought, "Thank heavens—it's just an earthquake." I knew it was important to keep my head on straight. I did for a very short while, and then I got mad.

FW: Why mad?

LEE: Because the girls were frightened. I kept telling them it would last just a little while. But when it kept going, I started screaming at the earthquake to go away! That was good.

FW: Why?

LEE: I was told by a psychiatrist that the only people who were not afraid of earthquakes were the inmates of an asylum. Getting mad, I was told, was the best thing that could happen because when you're angry, you don't feel fear as much.

FW: You were born on May 27. That makes you a Gemini. Do you have two personalities?

LEE: Not two: 50. I constantly change to suit the people around me. I guess that makes me kind of wishy-washy. On the other hand, that's why I enjoy acting. Most of all, I want to be accepted, to be liked.

FW: Did being Miss America help you?

LEE: Without it I wouldn't be in the business. Oh, maybe I would play a little theater, or teach, but being Miss America gave me the attention I needed.

FW: What did your father do?

LEE: He was a liquor salesman. Both of my parents worked in the store—my mother during the day, my father at night.

FW: Was your father ever held up?

LEE: Several times, but I'll never forget one time when he really got mad. I was in college at the time, cramming for finals. My father came home at three o'clock, livid with rage. "Some punk kid robbed me," he said. "This kid came up and asked me to change five dollars, and when I opened the cash register, out comes a gun. And he says, 'Okay, Pop, I want it all.' Imagine—calling me Pop!"

"I constantly change to suit the people around me. . . . Most of all, I want to be accepted, to be liked."

FW: How old was he then?

LEE: He was 46, but he had iron-gray hair. The boy was finally caught by the father of one of my girl friends. He was on the vice squad in San Francisco and one day he arrested a fellow carrying matches with the initials of my father's store printed on them. He put two and two together, and that's how the boy got caught.

FW: Are your parents still alive?

LEE: My father died, but my mother is living with me and helps me look after the girls.

FW: I understand that you and Frank are no longer together. Are you divorced?

FW: How old are your daughters?

FW: Would you mind if either of them tried out for Miss America?

LEE: Most certainly not. The scholarship they might get is the largest in the world.

FW: It's been 20 years since you were Miss America, but you still have an excellent figure. How do you do it?

LEE: I don't believe in diets. I enjoy eating. But I watch how much I eat. I never have any sweets and very seldom desserts of any kind.

FW: Do you ever see other Miss Americas?

LEE: Every ten years all the Miss Americas get together. The last time was in 1973, which also happened to be the 100th anniversary of the Atlantic City boardwalk.

LEE: Yes. [Hesitating] Relatively happy.

"WATERGATER" EGIL KROGH Was jail a "country club"?

Convicted organizer of the "White House Plumbers" Egil Krogh talks about his life in jail: "My first visit to the prison dentist found me sitting in the chair with a fellow inmate examining my teeth. The man happened to be a narcotics dealer that I had tracked for two years while working for the FBI. I figured that was it. I was going to lose all of my teeth and probably my head. But the guy just looked at me and said, 'I didn't do my job well and I ended up here, and I guess you didn't do yours well either, so you're here too.'" Krogh recently chatted with a writer at a resort in Colorado. "Contrary to some people's opinions," he said, "federal penitentiaries are not country clubs. We worked eight to twelve hours a day keeping a farm and a herd of cows. It's not as if you have a choice of where you want to be sent."

When the Tony Awards flash on ABC-TV screens April 20, you'll catch a glimpse of Broadway's greatest stars, past and present. But what about the people responsible for the show's production? This is the ninth consecutive year that Alexander H. Cohen and his wife Hildy Parks have staged the Tony show—he produces it, she writes all the material. They are one of the few successful husband-and-wife show-business teams around. Alex has a reputation for being a workhorse and has an utter disdain for weekends and national holidays; he even schedules meetings on those occasions. He's invariably the last one left in a restaurant, and is only aware that the management wants to call it a night when the chairs are being piled on the tables. "Well," says Alex, "it's better to be known as the man who closes restaurants than the man who closes shows!" Alex is also the executive producer of the U.S. Bicentennial World Theater Festival.
